ROADHOUSE MOB BADLY INJURES TWO OF GUESTS

Capital Policeman and Brother Beaten With Blackjacks.

COAST GUARDSMAN SHOT THROUGH LEG

Revelers Belabor Him as He Stumbles Under Force of Bullet.

PLEAS FOR MERCY IGNORED BY CROWD

Several Women Faint While Riot Rages More Than 30 Minutes.

Angered by the discovery of a Washington policeman in their midst, revelers at the Green Gables roadhouse near Suitland, Md., early yesterday set upon his party with pistols and blackjacks, wounding him and his brother, in a riot that lasted more than 30 minutes. Private Laurits Christensen, who was dining incognito with two girls, was badly beaten about the head, while his brother, Yens C. Christensen, a coast guardsmen from New York, was shot through the left leg.

Christensen, who was off duty, was seated at a table with his companions when a dancer is said to have shouted "that man's a D. C. cop." Seven or eight men who had just arrived in a cab pulled the officer to his feet, and one of them struck him in the head with a blackjack.

When Yens ran to his brother's aid, he was shot down and set upon with blackjacks and chairs. The policeman broke away and ran for help, but collapsed in a nearby home. The men continued to beat his brother, despite his pleas for mercy.

Women Plead for Mercy.

Pandemonium followed the shooting, and the place was quickly emptied. Several women fainted, and were removed by their escorts, who refused to aid the Coast Guardsman. Ima Adamson and Louise Robey, who accompanied the Christensens to the roadhouse, pleaded with the assailants, but were roughly pushed aside as the men continued to belabor their escort with fists, chairs and blackjacks.

Finally the men jumped in a cab and sped toward Washington. It was more than 30 minutes later before the girls could induce a passing motorist to take Christensen to Casualty Hospital. His brother, the policeman, was brought to the same hospital shortly afterward.

Taken to Baltimore.

After receiving treatment for a fractured leg, bullet wounds and severe bruises and lacerations about the head and body, the Coast Guardsman was removed to Providence Hospital and later to the Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

He came to Washington Saturday to witness the Marine-Coast Guard football game at Griffith Stadium.

The policeman was discharged from the hospital after receiving treatment for head wounds. He is attached to the Eleventh Precinct, and has been a member of the force for many years. Some months ago he was demoted from the rank of detective sergeant. He lives at M street, near Ninth street northwest. The two girls in the party live in an apartment at L street, near Ninth street northwest.

Two Robbers Captured After Kidnaping Pair

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Two robbers who kidnaped Carl V. Wisner, Chicago attorney, and his niece in a holdup tonight, were captured ten minutes later after a running gun fight with two police squads. No one was injured in the battle.

The attorney and his niece had been snatched from the sidewalk in front of the Wisner home just after they had alighted from an automobile.

Former Georgian Envoy Shot Down

Assassin Declares That Act Was Inspired by Political Reasons.

Paris, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Eli Ramichvili, former minister plenipotentiary to Paris of the Republic of Georgia, was assassinated today while driving in an open automobile through the Place d'Italia. He was shot twice by a man who described himself to police as a Georgian workman, giving the name of Bse Pchanovkvadze.

Police said they believed the shooting the outgrowth of political rivalries between Soviet and White party adherents.

Pchanovkvadze told police he killed the minister "for political reasons," but declined to go into any details.

He described himself as a bricklayers' helper, but police said his hands were rather delicately manicured for a follower of that occupation.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: When I was a boy in the hills of Vermont, 12 miles from the railroad, the only merchandise I saw was in the country store. But my horizon was widened by certain publications containing pictures and descriptions of things that appealed to youth. I read and bought. The man who supplied them became rich and died a great philanthropist. He advertised.

It is essential in the first instance to make good merchandise. But that is not enough. It is just as essential to create a desire for it. That is advertising.

The person or association of persons who can produce that combination of excellence and demand is performing a real public service. They enlarge the mental horizon and provide new forms of utility and beauty. The material benefits pass over into spiritual benefits. Culture and charity are the by-products.

A country that is spending $2,000,000,000 annually in the production and application of beauty lotions has resources with which to make large purchases of what it concludes it wants. The only way for the people to become acquainted with what they want is through judicious advertising. Goods not worth advertising are not worth selling.

5-DAY WEEK ASKED FOR U. S. WORKERS

Senator Walsh to Introduce Bill So Providing as Relief for Jobless.

SEES EXAMPLE CHANCE

(Associated Press.)

Establishment of the five-day week in all branches of the Government service was proposed yesterday by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, as a remedy for unemployment.

Walsh has embodied this plan in a bill to be introduced today which would make it effective for one year and authorize the President in his discretion to continue it another year.

Walsh said the proposal of the administration for speeding up public works was "all very well as far as it goes."

"At best, however," he added, "such a program reaches only laborers, artisans and building material industries and is of no help in furnishing employment for the so-called white-collar workers, who belong to the class which is, in the aggregate, a very large element of the 'unemployed.'"

Walsh asserted the Government "has a magnificent opportunity to set an example to private business to put into practice its own preachings."

"By putting the Government service in the present emergency on a five-day week basis without any reduction in existing rates of pay," he said, "it will create more jobs at a time when jobs are so sorely needed."

Legion Plans to Invite Prince of Wales Here

Topeka, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Ralph T. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, late today announced the Prince of Wales would be invited to attend the 1931 convention of the American Legion in Detroit.

No invitation has been sent yet, Commander O'Neil said, but one would be issued as soon as arrangements were made for observing proper formalities.

Mussolini Demonstrates Adeptness at Fencing

Rome, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini today showed himself to be an expert fencer.

At the conclusion of a ceremony of consigning a banner to the Fascist Antiaircraft Corps, the premier before his blackshirt officers, took part in a sharp match with Gen. Vaccari. Vaccari, who is a skilled fencer, was forced several time to admit himself "toccato" — touched. The officers loudly cheered the fighting premier.

4 ESCAPED MANIACS CAPTURED BY POLICE

Fight Marks Apprehension; Woman Charged With Aiding Criminals.

THREE STILL AT LARGE

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Four maniacs, who made a sensational escape from Matteawan State Hospital last Thursday, were captured in a Brooklyn apartment early today, and were on their way back to Matteawan tonight in an ambulance guarded by five keepers.

Three maniacs are still at large. The four were captured in the home of Mrs. Mary Ochsenfels, who was arrested and charged with harboring criminals.

Those captured were William H. Nelson, who had escaped previously and who returned and liberated the other six; Harry Gordon, the "mad butcher," of Rochester, N. Y.; John H. Gambill and John Biggins, of New York. They said they escaped because of "brutality and starvation" at the hospital.

Those still at large are Frank Vanderkuyler, murderer, who appeared at the home of his wife, after his escape, and threatened her and their two children with death; Anthony A. Alloy, called by police one of the most dangerous pyromaniacs alive, and Joseph Kaylor.

After their capture, the four were taken to Kings County Hospital and from there to the West Side Jail, in Manhattan, and then started on their way back to Matteawan.

Detectives said they picked up the trail of the fugitive maniacs yesterday and located the apartment where they were hiding. This morning they lay in wait until they saw the four enter, and then rushed the place.

Police said the fugitives put up a terrific battle and had to be beaten into submission. Nelson and Gambill both carried loaded revolvers, the officers said, and burglars' tools were found in the apartment.

Matthew Quay Glaser, Once Curtis Aid, Dies

New York, Dec. 7 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Matthew Quay Glaser, lobbyist extraordinary and Curtis-for-President booster in 1928, died at 8 p. m. Saturday in his home here. Mr. Glaser was 54. Funeral arrangements had not been made late today, but interment will be in Mount Pleasant Cemetery Tuesday.

The man, whose 10-gallon Quaker hat and booming voice came to be regarded as among the fixtures in the Washington lobby and outskirts if State political circles, figured in the news this fall in Maj. Maurice Campbell's series revealing his experience as prohibition administrator of the metropolitan district. Maj. Campbell told how Glaser on numerous occasions sought brewery permits favors.

Four Members of One Family Hurt; Inquiry Ordered Into Saturday Wrecks.

Accidents in Washington and nearby Virginia took one life yesterday and injured six persons, four seriously.

St. Elmo Burgess, 50 years old, of 2006 Twentieth street northeast, division passenger agent for the Southern Railway, was instantly killed when the automobile in which he was riding struck a pole at Eighth street and Rhode Island avenue.

Those injured yesterday were:

Michael A. D'Manna, 47 years old, of 1171 Sixth street northeast. In Freedman's Hospital, condition grave.

Luciano Maiesti, 47 years old, of 2233 First street northwest. Casualty Hospital, condition critical.

James Moffett, 37 years old, of 823 G street southeast. Providence Hospital, condition serious.

Mr. Burgess had passed the afternoon at the home of Mr. D'Manna and was returning to his home with D'Manna and Maiestlin D'Manna's car when it crashed into a pole in the middle of Rhode Island avenue near Eight place. So powerful was the impact the motor of the car was driven into the front seat.

Mr. Burgess was dead when taken from the wreckage by taxicab drivers. He was taken to Casualty Hospital where he was pronounced dead. Maiesti, a machinist in the Navy Yard, was also taken to Casualty. He has a fractured left leg, and possible internal injuries.

D'Manna was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. Doctors there said he has a compound fracture of the skull and possible internal injuries. Little hope is held for his recovery.

Mrs. D'Manna said that her husband and Burdgess left their home to go to the Burgess home and wanted her to accompany them but she was too busy.

MILITANT DRYS MEET HERE TO UNIFY EFFORTS

Leaders Say They Are Determined to Face "Whole Picture."

WICKERSHAM BOARD RETURNS TO ITS JOB

WETS ALSO GATHER FOR LONG MEETING

Will Try to Agree on Substitute to Propose for 18th Amendment.

(Associated Press.)

Dry leaders gathered in Washington yesterday for a series of meetings, determined, in the words of one, to "face the whole picture" and evolve a unified program of nation-wide activity.

Word that the dry forces would attempt, in the next three days, to formulate a program more militant than any since prohibition became a law was given out last night following a five-hour meeting of the executive committee of the National Temperance Council.

Meanwhile, members of President Hoover's law enforcement commission returned to their own problem of writing a report on the dry law, following a twelve-day recess, while individual wet advocates likewise converged upon the Capitol to take part in a "national constitutional convention," convening tomorrow for an indefinite period.

Referendum Discussed.

Approximately a dozen nationally known dry advocates were present at the meeting of the executive committee of the council. A decision was reached among them to bring flatly before their organizations the troublesome question of whether there should be a national prohibition referendum.

Dr. Ira Landrith, of Chicago, president of the National Temperance Council, said that among the leaders, however, "there was not a word said in favor of such a proposition." He added no definite vote was taken, other than the decision to let the council itself give an expression upon it.

This action followed close upon an almost unanimous vote against a proposal for a referendum taken late Saturday by the legislative committee of the National Association of Organizations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment. In that group, too, it was decided to bring the subject before the conference when it convenes Wednesday by merely reporting the adverse vote.

Dr. Cherrington Spokesman.

Dr. Ernest Cherrington, secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, was appointed spokesman for the executive committee of the council meeting today. He said there existed no "Pollyanna" spirit among members of the council as to the situation facing them, and that

RED THRONGS CHEER SENTENCE OF DEATH FOR 5 CONSPIRATORS

Group of Eight Calm as Verdict Is Read; Three Jailed.

VICTIMS' PROPERTY TO BE CONFISCATED

Clemency Appeals Must Be Filed Within 48 Hours.

SABOTAGE PROGRAM REVIEWED BY JUDGE

Court Maintains Silence on Testimony Implicating Foreign Groups.

Moscow, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Eight once prominent engineers, on trial since November 25 under charges that they conspired with foreign interests to overthrow the Soviet regime, heard with stoicism today a verdict that condemned five of them to death and the other three to ten years imprisonment, with confiscation of all their property.

Loud and prolonged cheering and handclapping greeted the verdict, and even this cheering in the old ballroom, where Russian nobility once promenaded, failed to shake the eight men who previously had confessed fully, into a microphone, and before grinding movie cameras.

All have 48 hours to petition the central executive committee for clemency, and after that time those condemned to death may be shot at the convenience of the authorities.

Leaders Sentenced.

The men sentenced to death are:

Leonid Ramsin, 43 years old, former professor in the Moscow Technical Institute and director of the heat and power institute.

Victor Larichev, second in command to Ramsin, 43 and former head of the fuel department of the state planning commission.

Nikolai Charnovsky, 62, professor in various technical institutes and president of the scientific and technical council of the supreme economic council.

Ivan Kalinikov, 53, former official of the state planning commission and professor in the Military Aerial Academy.

Oldest Man Doomed.

Alexander Fedotov, 67, and oldest of the conspirators; professor in various institutes and chairman of the scientific research textile institute.

Those sentenced to ten years imprisonment are:

Vladimir Ochkin, 30, and the youngest of the group; secretary to Ramsin in the heat and power institute and manager of the research section of the Supreme Economic Council.

Sergei Kuprianov, 59, director of the techinal section of the Supreme Economic Council.

Those Saved Smile.

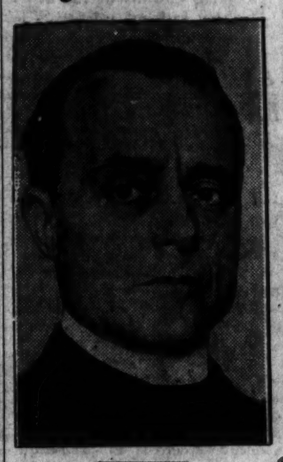
The three men whose lives were spared smiled somewhat happily as they heard the verdict of imprisonment instead of death.

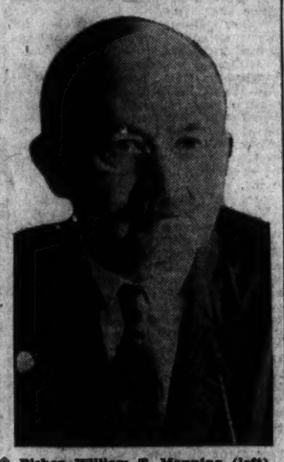
Crowds began gathering around the House of Columns at 4 o'clock this afternoon to hear the verdict, and squads of mounted police finally found it necessary to surround the block containing the building, in order to keep the entrances clear.

The doors opened at 6 o'clock and in a few minutes the galleries and main floor of the courtroom were jammed. For an hour or more the spectators kept their seats and then gradually moved out to the lobbies. Laughing and chatting girls were in the mass, resembling persons attending an opera rather than awaiting a decision that might mean death for eight men. Their escorts were gay, too, and the whole thing was considerable of a holiday affair.

The buffet on the second floor of the building did so great a business

Judge Lindsey Beaten, Ejected From Church





Bishop William T. Manning (left), whose denunciation of former Judge Ben B. Lindsey (right) led to disorder in New York Cathedral and arrest of latter when he tried to reply.

Charged With Disorderly Conduct After Attack on Bishop Manning.

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A little man from Denver, the former Judge Ben B. Lindsey, turned golden rule Sunday into a pandemonium of epithets, recrimination and violence today at Bishop William T. Manning's church, the fashionable Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Lindsey, with one friend at his side, sat tense among the 3,500 well-groomed worshipers and heard himself denounced as the author of a book, "the most filthy, insidious and covertly written piece piece of propaganda ever published in behalf of lewdness, promiscuity, adultery and unrestrained sexual gratification."

The bishop, coldly calm, brought his sermon to an end with a denun-

BORAH PLANS FIGHT ON "TREASURY RAID"

Will Urge Tax Increase if Expected Large Deficit Becomes Certainty.

FAVORS ECONOMY FIRST

(Associated Press.)

Warning against any raid on the Treasury in an attempt to restore prosperity was given yesterday by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, as Congress prepared to speed an enactment this week the emergency unemployment and drought relief measures.

Senator Borah voiced no particular criticism of the $60,000,000 drought measure before the Senate and the $110,000,000 public improvements bill before the House, but he repeated his demand for an increas in taxs if th $355,000,00 deficit is prospect for this year materializes.

"I have no desire to see taxes increased," said the Idaho senator, who yesterday proposed a 2 per cent increase to meet the proportional deficit. "But what I said and now say is this—if these expenditures are to be made I see no way to avoid increasing taxes.

"We certainly are not going to have a bond issue. Our deficit is climbing toward $40,000,000. Where are you going to get the money? There is no place to get it except out of the taxpayer's pocket. We will lose nothing by being candid with the public.

"There seems to be a widespread belief that you can restore prosperity from the public Treasury. It is not only a false theory but a vicious theory. Dire emergencies may have to be met from the public Treasury, but the idea that you can restore permanent prosperity by spending public money and thereby necessi-

BARTHOU QUITS PLAN TO FORM MINISTRY

Complication Arises Over Inclusion of Tardieu in Government.

RADICALS PROVE FACTOR

Paris, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Senator Louis Barthou abandoned his effort tonight to form a cabinet to succeed the government of Andre Tardieu, after he had conferred all day with political leaders, including Louis Marin and Aristide Briand.

An announcement came shortly after the senator had gone to the Elysee Palace this evening to acquaint President Doumergue with the state of negotiations for forming a ministry of concentration.

Barthou's failure apparently was due to the Radical party's objection to the inclusion of Marin, head of the extreme right group, in the proposed ministry. It was regarded as significant that Tardieu had insisted that at least one member of the Radicals should be in the projected Barthou ministry. Barthou had expected to form a ministry which would have included himself, Briand and Tardieu in key positions.

Early in the afternoon, Barthou was extremely optimistic over his efforts to assemble a Government to succeed Tardieu's, which was overthrown in the Senate last week, but trouble descended on him after a meeting tonight of the Radical party.

Then arose a complication over participation by Tardieu in a Barthou cabinet. Tardieu's insistence that at least one member of the radicals should be in the ministry is attributed to the fact that throughout his tenure as premier this party voted steadily nearly 100 strong for him. Political circles feared this development might keep Tardieu out of the new combination, and that without him the ministry would be shortlived.

Toy Fund to Be Proof Of Living Santa Claus

Will Confirm Discovery in Famous Editorial Many Years Ago.

In 1897 the editor of the New York Sun received the following letter:

"Dear Editor: I am 8 years old. Some of my little friends say there is no SANTA CLAUS. Papa says, 'If you see it in the Sun it's so.' Please tell me the truth, is there a SANTA CLAUS?

"VIRGINIA O'HANLON.

"115 West Ninety-fifth street."

And the next day the editor of the New York Sun wrote in the editorial column his answer, which has become immortal, as follows:

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and

Hoovers' Grandchildren Arrive Here for Christmas

Peggy, Herbert 3d and Baby Joan to Occupy Suite in White House; Mother Who Brings Them From West Going to Ill Husband in South.

From across the continent, three little Hoovers, Peggy Ann, Herbert 3d and Baby Joan, arrived yesterday to occupy their special suite in a White House already filled with Christmas presents and plans.

Brought by their mother, they came prepared to stay, with a trained nurse for Joan and a governess for the older two; with complete wardrobes, plenty of playthings and the special feeding rules doctors lay down nowadays for growing boys and girls.

For they are to live with their grandparents while their father, Herbert Hoover, jr., is recovering from illness at Asheville, N. C. Ms. Hoover, jr., will return to her husband in Asheville.

Four nights and three days they had been on a train on their journey from Southern California. But even Baby Joan had a sunny smile for those who welcomed her at the station—the President's wife among them.

The children were whirled to the White House, where a four-room nursery, outfitted in haste as an "emergency measure," was ready for them to start "housekeeping" on the east end of the third floorhigh above the grand receptions in the East Room.

There they wil live very simply, as all sensible small boys and girls live,

Mississippi Students Burn State's Governor in Effigy

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The Commercial Appeal says Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo was burned in effigy at midnight on the University of Mississippi campus at Oxford, Miss., by a group of 250 Ole Miss students, incensed because of the action which led to the suspending of the university from the Southern Association of Colleges.

Eugene Roper, of the Commercial Appeal staff, was an eyewitness to the incident, and wrote the paper's story under a University (Miss.) date line, according to the article.

The article, in part, follows:

"A pair of pajamas, stuffed with cotton and saturated with gasoline, was hoisted to the top of the flagpole in the center of the university grounds at 11:45 o'clock and 15 minutes later hundreds were crowded around the pole."

University, Miss., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Chancellor J. N. Powers, of the University of Mississippi, expressed regret tonight over the report burning of an effigy bearing the placard "Down with Bilbo!" on the university campus last midnight.

I have nothing to say, because I have not yet had time to make an investigation," the chancellor said. "Of course, I am, indeed, sorry the regrettable incident had to occur, * * * particularly in my absence."

Gov. Bilbo was at his Poplerville

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Page 12 Today

that all its tea and mineral water were sold early in the evening, for no one who had the luck to get in deserted the building. Some who apparently had attended trials before brought sandwiches and apples to munch, as they strolled along the corridors.

By 11 p. m. every one looked weary but persistent, and the four judges, who had been locked in their chambers since around noon yesterday, also appeared tired as they took their seats.

The judges had worked practically day and night since retiring, as under Soviet law they were not permitted to leave their chambers until the verdict had been written. They also were not permitted to see any one except special red guards, who were assigned to take them their meals.

Bell Signals Verdict.

Some 15 minutes later a bell clanged and a great dash for seats resulted.

The eight defendants filed into the prisoners' box and soon arc lights began to sputter and motion-picture cameras to buzz.

The men were somewhat pale as they entered, but regained their composure when seated, thereby drawing some favorable comment from the jammed courtroom. Prof. Ramsin appeared paler than the others, but he smoked cigarets nonchalantly, as he glanced about at the crowd. Two of the other defendants whispered to each other.

Only the grinding of the cameras and the sputtering of the lights were heard as the judges arose for the verdict and all others stood likewise, for all must be on their feet during the reading of a verdict in a Soviet court.

Prisoners Use Earphones.

Judge Vishinsky began the words that meant life or death.

As the prisoners rose they adjusted their earphones—they wore these during most of the trial in order to hear the words spoken into the microphone. Larichev stood with downcast eyes and Charnovsky gulped two glasses of water after requesting an attendant to bring them.

N. B. Krilenko, with shaven head and fierce mien, looked the indomitable prosecutor as he stood and seemingly scowled at the prisoners and spectators.

Judge Vishinsky's voice grew hoarse as he read, and he halted occasionally to sip a glass of tea.

Evidence Reviewed.

The verdict required about 45 minutes to read and it reviewed in brief practically all evidence that had been submitted during the two weeks' trial.

It found that military intervention had been sponsored by the eight defendants, backed by "capitalists and military circles of France and the Torgprom (Russian Emigre Organization in Paris) and the Industrial party of Russia."

The court also asserted that "the anti-Soviet engineers produced the most hostile and most violent leaders of counter-revolutionary organizations."

Answering charges from abroad that the trial was a frame-up, the verdict asserted that the mysterious French agents, "K" and "R," named by the defendants as passing on information from Moscow to general staff officers of Paris, were actual persons.

Foreigners Not Mentioned.

Regarding this same thing the verdict said the court would "make special application to the government on the matter," which was proved at a closed session after an order had been issued against mentioning foreign governments in open court.

While the engineers previously had confessed to plotting foreign intervention and sabotaging Soviet industry, through the organization of the Industrial party, the court found this party was "not connected with the masses and had no support from the laboring population and peasants."

Prof. Ramsin has a young and beautiful Georgian wife, but if any relatives of the defendants were in court when sentence was passed, the fact did not become known. The families have kept away from the trial.

New Doom Spread.

London, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Dispatches from Riga, Latvia, said tonight that great excitement marked the closing scenes of the trial of eight engineers in Moscow.

Spectators greeted the announcement that five men had been sentenced to death and three given ten years imprisonment with loud and continued applause, and the excited crowd apparently expected the condemned prisoners to be shot tonight.

Reading of the sentences, which was done in a packed hall, lasted for fifteen minutes.

Reuters and the Exchange Telephone Agency, British news services, were unable to obtain anything direct from Moscow except the bare fact that the eight men had been sentenced.

Small Farm's Net Return Decreases

Government Finds Average on $15,242 Investment $1,298 in 1929.

(Associated Press.)

The average return to farmers owning 270 acres, representing an investment of $15,242, was $1,298 in 1929.

Analysis outlined yesteday in the annual report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics placed cash receipts from nearly 12,000 owner operated farms of that size at $2,669 per farm.

Cash outlay for current operating expenses amounted to $1,572, leaving a cash balance of $1,097 for the year.

There was an average increase of $201 in the inventory value of crops, live stock, machinery and farm supplies, and the farms supplied the families with food valued at $262.

The net return was slightly less in 1929 than that in 1928, largely because of the lower prices for inventory items at the end of the year than at the beginning.

"Averages obtained in this inquiry addressed to owner operators," the report said, "are considerably above the averages for farms of all sizes and tenure classes.

Seven Persons Drowned As Coal Schooner Sinks

Watch Hill, R. I., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Seven persons lost their lives when the coal-laden Tern schooner Storm Petrel foundered in the chill windswept waters of Long Island Sound 7 miles off here late yesterday, the Coast Guard reported today.

The drowned were four men, including the captain, whose name was believed to be Dial; two women, one of whom was the captain's wife and the other the ship's cook, and a child. The names of the others were undetermined. All were Negroes.

INCREASE IS ASKED IN FORCES OF NAVY

Adams Calls for More Men and Money in Annual Report to Hoover.

WANTS AIRPLANE BASE

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Adams sailed straightaway into a statement of the wants of the Navy for men and money yesterday in his annual report.

Addressing President Hoover, he called for more man power, better pay and promotions at regular intervals to prevent the "stagnation" of officers through long periods in the same grade.

The Secretary of the Navy pointed out that the present level of compensation was 11 per cent above that received in 1908, but said the cost of living had more than doubled since that time.

Other legislative proposals for which he advocated congressional approval included:

Authorization to modernize the battleships New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho. Establishment of a naval airship base on the Pacific Coast; guarantees for conservation of the naval petroleum and oil shale reserves, and bans against photographs, sketches or maps of vital military and naval defense installations and equipment.

Plane Patrol Planned.

The increasing importance of aviation to the naval forces was evident throughout the report. A six-plane patrol unit will be added to both battle and scouting fleets, and two scouting squadrons of twenty planes and twelve planes, respectively, will be attached to new light cruisers.

"A need exists for additional airplane carriers in order to exploit to the full the possibilities of naval aviation in operations with the fleet," Mr. Adams said. A West Coast air base was considered essential and selection of a site was urged upon Congress at an early date, whether or not the Navy ordered construction of a new giant dirigible.

During the year, the "number of enlisted men was not adequate to man fully all types of ships, and it was necessary to operate most types of ships with allowances which were considerably under the actual complement of the ships."

The allowances averaged but 87.9 per cent of the actual complement of the ships, which the Secretary said "does not keep a Navy fully prepared for war."

Curtails Shore Stations.

Although Ernest Lee Jahncke, Assistant Secretary, has been active in curtailing work at Naval shore stations as an economy measure, the report found there were "more navy yards on the East coast than could be economically maintained."

The undertaking of a submarine replacement program was proposed. During the past year, upkeep costs have increased. The report added that "due principally to the age of a large number of submarines, it is felt the performance of submarine engineering material is not commensurate with its maintenance costs."

The material condition of the fleet was seen as generally good, qualified by the difficulty of maintaining efficiency "due to the age of a large number of the ships." Destroyers and submarines were found to be in the least efficient condition.

The Secretary praised the efficiency of the Guardia National of Nicaragua as being "in accordance with a definite policy to build up a native constabulary capable of preserving order after the eventual withdrawal of Marine forces in Nicaragua."

"A distinct improvement in almost every phase of the health of the Navy," was found an encouraging sign. Only 394 deaths were recorded during 1929 "making the death rate from all causes 3.36 per 1,000."

BORAH PLANS FIGHT ON TREASURY RAID

tating the imposition of more taxes is unsound.

"I favor, therefore, holding expenditures down as much as possible and still meeting the actual emergency. If there appears to be a deficit, I am in favor of meeting it by increasing income taxes, especially in the higher brackets."

Despite the alarm of President Hoover over the fiscal situation, there appeared every likelihood tonight that the Senate would stand by the $60,000,000 drought bill unanimously reported by its agriculture committee over administration demand for a $25,000,000 fund.

The stand of Senator Borah, however, was expected to check the force of any drive for increased appropriations in other directions. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, is looking for some way of getting cash into the pockets of the World War veterans holding bonus insurance certificates, but Secretary Mellon, so far, is opposed.

The House appropriations committee has taken Mr. Hoover at his word in his demand for strict economy and has pared down the $150,000,000 public improvements fund asked by the President to $110,000,000.

However, a party battle is in prospect in the House over the decision of the Republicans to limit the drought relief to $30,000,000. Representative Aswell (Democrat), Louisiana, is going to insist upon the $60,000,000 figure which Senator McNary (Republican), Oregon, successfully sponsored before the enate agriculture committee.

enator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, with an eye to avoiding an extra session in the spring, prepared yesterday to speed consideration of the mass of nominations facing the enate this week and to get the appropriations committee to work on the vital supply bills.

The drought relief measure is expected to be acted upon in both the House and Senate this week.

Armed Robbers Seized By Student Policeman

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Frank Mitchell, 22-year-old student policeman, had postponed buying a uniform until he had satisfactorily passed the police training tests.

Last night he walked past a jewelry store and a woman cried hysterically, "There is a holdup going on in there." Drawing the revolver he is allowed by the regulations to carry, Mitchell arrived at the door of the jewelry store just as two robbers were leaving with $1,300 in jewelry and cash.

"Get back in there or I'll shoot," said Mitchell. He corralled his men, disarmed them, and after turning the men over to officers who arrived in a radio scout car, went down to headquarters to write his first report. He will buy a uniform Monday.

TAX REFUNDS COST U. S. $241,526,816

MANY CLAIMS REJECTED

(Associated Press.)

Tax refunds cost the Government $241,526,816 the last fiscal year.

This was announced yesterday by David Burnett, Internal Revenue Commissioner. He said in his annual report that rejected claims for tax overassessments totaled $164,093,902.

Of the overassessments granted, $124,019,820 represented amounts not collected. A total of $35,819,633 was credited against taxes due in other years while $81,687,363 was refunded or paid in cash.

Interest aggregating $36,515,374 was paid on the amounts refunded or credited.

During the year, Mr. Burnett, said, 44,166 claims against the Government were adjusted. Of the number, 31,317 were allowed in full or in part, while 12,849 were rejected.

The commissioner said income taxes collected for the year amounted to $2,410,259,230, an increase of $78,984,801 over the 1929 year despite the 1 per cent decrease in the income tax rate on normal and corporation income.

Miscellaneous internal revenue aggregated $629,886,502, an increase of $22,106,556. Of the miscellaneous collections, tobacco taxes reached a new high level, totaling $450,339,060, an increase of $18,894,517.

DRY LEADERS TRY TO UNIFY EFFORTS the program they hoped to evolve would be more extensive than any taken in the last decade.

Dr. Cherrington said this program would not be pointed directly toward the 1932 presidential campaign, but that the unity they hoped to obtain among the more than a score of dry groups would lead indirectly toward it.

The program for the council itself during the next two days calls for an address by Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Antisaloon League, on "The Political Situation and What We Should Do About It," as well as addresses by Oliver Stewart, president of the Flying Squadron, on the need for forming a definite organization for work in the 1932 campaign, and by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the W. C. T. U., on the work being done by women.

The meeting of the Wickersham commission tomorrow will find it working as a whole for only the fourth day out of the last 23 days. It was said at commission headquarters that all of the members were expected to be present, with the exception of Federal Judge William S. Kenyon, of Iowa, who is detained by a session of his court.

Members expressed the view that the commission's report will be out of their hands before January 1, but that there were differences of opinion among the group on the final recommendations.

The meeting of the "national constitutional convention," which will assemble, leaders believe, approximately 150 persons, has for its announced purpose the reaching of an agreement on a single substitute for the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act that would be supported by a majority of the wet forces.

PROMISE OF BRIDE IS KEPT 14 YEARS

English Woman Asks Aid of United States in Tracing Husband.

WAS AN ARMY DESERTER

Special to The Washington Post.

San Francisco, Dec. 7.—"I promise to wait until I die."

Fourteen years ago, in the midnight darkness of a London railway station, the daughter of an English admiral whispered these words to an American soldier of fortune then in service with the British army.

Like other romances born in the shadow of war, hers proved to be a mere will-o'-the-wisp, in this case pursued doggedly and fruitlessly through the years.

The story, that of the undying trail of a woman's love—is revealed in a letter received by presidio authorities asking help in tracing the knight errant.

Her letter follows:

"I am recently out from London and I do not know a soul in the whole continent. I met my husband in London, 1916, and Christmas eve he wired me to meet him, as he was on leave from the front. We were not then married. I was not able to get in touch with him till ten minutes till midnight, when I saw him at Euston Station. He told me he had special leave to go to the States (he is American; I am English).

"Fed Up," She's Told.

"He got into the boat train for Liverpool and, just as it was moving out, leaned out of the window and said: 'Don't you understand? I'm fed up—I'm not coming back—I'm sick of war.' I ran along the platform to try to pull him to his senses, but it was pitch dark (air raids), and the night soon swallowed up both him and the train.

"I next heard of him in Florida, then Cuba; then he said he was going to Jamaica. Everywhere I could I followed him with cables till every penny of my tiny savings was gone. Some of these cables cost $25, but they were generally returned, as he didn't turn up where he said he would. I then heard from him in San Francisco.

"Later, when America declared war, he wrote that he had joined a cavalry regiment. He said as captain; I expect it was lieutenant. A short while after he went to a dance in his English uniform and was fated to run into his colonel. There was an inquiry. It came out that he was a deserter from the Royal Field Artillery. He was court martialed and dismissed from the United States service and, I heard, imprisoned.

"When I said good-by on that dark platform at Euston at midnight he asked me to promise to wait for him. I promised I would wait till I die. I kept it for nearly ten years. He didn't come back for me till 1926. Without a word of warning, after months of silence, he suddenly turned up in London. We were married a fortnight later in St. Martin's in Charing Cross.

"One week later he sailed. He had $4 when I saw him off at Southampton. He gave me $2 'for luck.' I had taken all my savings out of the post office and I, too, gave him half of mine (about $175). That was all he had in his pockets.

"He deserted me. I was still very young and more or less beautiful and he was very much in love. I was well educated, which made him say he found me the perfect companion. He said I had been his perfect pal through it all and begged me to go on waiting."

Fourth Series of Classes Opens Today for Dry Units

Schools to Teach Federal Agents Limits of Their Powers and Methods to Follow in 12 Centers; Good Results Are Claimed.

(Associated Press.)

Schools for Federal prohibition agents will open today in twelve cities, to give instruction in the best means of enforcing the dry laws.

Classes will be held under direction of 24 instructors trained in Washington, and at their close on December 20 will have constituted the fourth series of such schools held by Prohibition Director Woodcock in an effort to secure a complete corps of agents expertly equipped to enforce prohibition.

Harry M. Dengler, chief of the Prohibition Bureau's division of schools, explained it was planned to continue such classes, at three-week intervals, until next July.

At that time, he estimated, all the Federal agents will have received instruction in their own rights, under the law, how to secure evidence properly and how to avoid trespassing on the rights of citizens.

Schools will open tomorrow in Providence, R. I.; Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Norfolk, Va.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Beaumont, Tex.; Chicago, St. Paul, Oklahoma City, Denver and Seattle.

Following each series of schools, Dengler said, the written examinations of all attending agents are sent to Washington, erroneous impressions corrected and the record of each man placed on his permanent record. Two examinations are given, one on criminal investigation and the other on constitution and law.

Officials in other enforcement and prosecution agencies of the Government, he added, already have noticed improvement in the work of dry agents in uncovering violations of the law and preparing evidence.

In addition to actual school attendance, more than 1,900 agents also are enrolled in a correspondence course especially prepared for them by the bureau. This work was started by Dengler when Dr. James M Doran was chief of the bureau, and more than 8,500 written papers have been submitted by agents.

CHICAGOAN MANGLED IN BOMB EXPLOSION

Blast Follows as He Opens Package Sent by Messenger.

SON, 19, IS ALSO INJURED

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Tony May, 50, real estate dealer and professional bondsman, formerly known as the millionaire newsboy, was probably fatally injured, and his son, Frank, 14, was seriously hurt, by the explosion of a bomb in the May apartment today.

The bomb was delivered in a box by a messenger boy. The box bore a mail order house label.

May removed the wrapping and the device exploded, wrecking the apartment.

Tenants Become Panicky.

Panic spread throughout the building. Tenants summoned fire department squads, policemen and detectives.

May and his son were found unconscious among the wreckage. May's arms were mangled and his left leg was blown almost off. The boy, who apparently was some distance from the box when it was opened, was less seriously hurt.

Among motives people advanced was a theory that extortion may have been responsible for the bombing.

Started as Newsboy.

May, an immigrant Italian, came to America penniless as a boy of 10 and worked his way to affluence and power. He began as a newsboy and soon acquired a string of newsstands. He then entered the loan and real estate business and built up a sizeable fortune. Next he conducted a professional bonding concern.

May was well known in national sporting circles. He was associated with Jack Johnson when the pugilist reigned as heavyweight champion.

There was another bomb explosion today. This happened on a loading platform of the West Side plant of Sears, Roebuck & Co., causing damage estimated at $1,500.

A large hole was torn in the platform and many windows in the eight-story structure were shattered.

Writ Bars Funeral In Maryland Home

Deed Forbade Use of Property for Any Religious Rite.

Princess Anne, Md., Dec. 7.—An injunction restraining Mrs. Ida White, of Chance, from holding any kind of religious gathering in her home in that village operated to prevent the holding of funeral services at her home for Mrs. White's husband, who died there this week.

Several months ago William Jones, member of the Somerset County Board of Education, sold to Mrs. White a house and lot in Chance. For some reason he inserted in the deed to Mrs. White a clause specifying that the property should never be used "for any religious purpose."

After acquiring the property Mrs. White did hold some sort of religious gathering in her home, and Mr. Jones secured an injunction from the Somerset Circuit Court restraining her from holding such gatherings in the future.

Following the death of her husband Mrs. White was advised that the holding of funeral services would be in contempt of court, and the body was removed from the home for the funeral.

HOOVER CHILDREN ARRIVE FOR YULE

drinking plenty of orange juice and going to bed at 6 p. m.

Except, of course, for special occasions—like Christmas, now opportunely in the offing.

The President's wife, shopping for Christmas presents several mornings last week, combined toy buying for the Hoover Christmas trees, which have gifts for all who come calling, with more practical purchases for the new nursery.

Like Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, on informal shopping trips, she slipped in and out of stores, often unnoticed, but occasionally recognized by some one of especially sharp eyes.

No shopper on the streets was more happy and smiling—for the Hoovers always make much of Christmas, and, besides, the children were coming.

A family that likes to go back over a trail it has blazed, with a special custom for every gala occasion—that's the Hoovers. Two family parties, both for children, constituted last year's celebration and set a happy tradition for the Yuletide.

On Christmas Eve the dinner and the tree were for the children of the President's secretaries, whose parents, of course, were also of the party. On Christmas night the Cabinet children were guests of honor and the Cabinet members merely guests.

Lights were turned off, The President took for marching partner the smallest girl; Mrs. Hoover, the smallest boy. With lighted tapers and tinkling Christmas bells they led the way, the other guests following, in a Christmas march, to Marine Band music, down the long halls of the White House.

This year Peggy Ann, about 4½ years old, and Herbert 3d, about 3, may well be contenders for the "smallest girl" and "smallest boy" honors.

Funny Old Books Bring $20,000 Cash

Ancient School Lessons Carved on Wood Are Sold in England.

Newport, Isle of Wight, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A collection of 50 "horn books," ancient school lessons carved on wood, sold here recently for $20,000.

Pondering a number of "funny old books" which had been in his family for years, the owner asked a London appraiser to look at them and was dumfounded when the expert offered such a large amount.

Many of the "books" were made in the shape of hand mirrors and each had one simple lesson carved on one side. The name originated from the custom of protecting the lesson from wear, so one "book" could be used for generations, by covering the face with a thin piece of horn, hinged to permit "opening and closing" the book.

According to the expert this particular set was of the Tudor or Elizabethan period of English scholasticism.

POISON FOG CLAIMS THREE NEW VICTIMS

Queen of Belgians and Staff Visit Stricken Valley as Toll Reaches 67.

MANY ARE STILL SICK

Brussels, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Queen Elisabeth of the Belgians, accompanied by her staff, visited the death-stricken villages of the Meuse Valley today, entering the homes of several of the sick, and sympathizing with the bereaved.

Her majesty and Red Cross delegates listened to the stories of the slowly recovering victims, who told of an intense prickling sensation in the throat immediately after they entered what they called the poisonous fog.

Three more deaths, bringing the total to 67, and the fact that many are still suffering despite the lifting of the fog was advanced as an argument that the deaths were caused by noxious fumes released from an industrial plant.

These statements of the sufferers has caused the judicial authorities to proceed with post mortem examination of several of the victims, despite official statements that the deaths were due alone to the cold fog.

Sensational statements as to poison fumes continued to circulate today. Eyewitnesses said they noticed a narrow, dark cloud which originated in a neighboring height and which rolled along the valley.

Authorities investigating the possibility that some industrial plant permitted noxious fumes to escape visited a number of plants within a radius of 20 miles.

A similar calamity occurred in the winter of 1911, claiming as victims both men and animals. Post mortems at that time disclosed the deaths were from pulmonary emphysema. Fog epidemics of the same nature occurred in 1902 and 1897.

Grosmont, Yorkshire, England, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Fear that the mysterious fog-borne malady which has taken a toll in men and beasts in the Meuse Valley of Belgium, may be spreading to England was caused today by the inexplicable death of ten cattle on a farm near here.

Neither the veterinary surgeon attending the cattle nor the district veterinary inspector ever encountered a similar outbreak although they have definitely concluded the symptoms are not those of any known disease.

A certain amount of fog has prevailed over the Yorkshire region the last few days, but none of the other farms has been similarly affected.

$43,000 Awarded On Lynchburg Site

Commission Sets Value on Ground Required for Postoffice.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 7.—Commissioners named six weeks ago, in the proceeding of the Federal Government against the estate of the late Walter Smith, have awarded the estate the sum of $43,000 for its Ninth street property, with $4,000 allowed as settlements with renters. The renters are also to receive monthly rental allowances until the time of the actual acquirement by the Government. The matter is in the Federal court.

The property is sought by the Government to be added to the site for the proposed $750,000 postoffice building here.

A similar proceeding to secure the building occupied by the News and Advance, newspapers, is pending in the same court.

Hankow Launch Sinks; Total Drowned Unknown

Hankow, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Shipping circles here today were informed that the Chinese passenger launch, Sientau, operating between Hankow and Changsha, capsized and sank near Sinti on the night of December 2. The cause of the disaster to the small craft was not known here nor was the number of persons drowned or the number aboard when the Sientau left here for Changsha.

Unverified dispatches early in the day said 300 had drowned, but this was discredited by the size of the Sientau, and it was considered the report was grossly exaggerated as frequently happens in Chinese press circles.

REV. W. E. BARTON, NOTED AUTHOR, DIES

Father of Bruce Barton Rose to Fame From an Humble Start.

KNOWN AS LECTURER

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The Rev. Dr. William E. Barton, noted clergyman, autohor and lecturer, died today at the Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn.

He was the father of Bruce Barton, widely known advertising man and author. This son and another, Charles William Barton, editor and publisher of the Sheridan (Wyo.) Enterprise, were at his bedside.

Services will be conducted at the Broadway Tabernacle Tuesday by the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, a life-long friend, who as Dr. Barton had been, was a moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches.

Burial will be at Foxboro, Mass., where Dr. Barton maintained a summer home.

Worked His Way Up.

Dr. Barton was born at Sublette, Ill., June 28, 1861, the son of a country doctor.

As a youth he received such schooling as the countryside afforded. Determined to obtain a college education, he worked in the wheat fields, saved his wages and enrolled in Berea College, Ky.

The ministry attracted him, and he was ordained in the Congregational Church on his graduation in 1885. Soon afterward he married Esther Treat Bushnell, of Johnsonville, Ohio.

For two years the young preacher labored in his first charge at Robbins, Tenn., the experience determining him to return to school. He went to the theological seminary at Oberlin, Ohio, worked his way and won the degree of bachelor of divinity in 1890.

Then began a career that led to eminence in the ministry, in writing and in lecturing. After nine years' service at Wellington, Ohio, and at Boston, Dr. Barton went to Oak Park, Ill.; where he established a reputation as a clergyman who dealt with realism and abhorred sham.

Becomes College Professor.

Until 1828 he had made his winter home at Nashville, where he occupied the chair of practical theology in Vanderbilt. There he organized the College Side Church, which he served until stricken, in September.

His successor as pastor of this church is Jason Noble Pierce, formerly pastor of the church President Coolidge attended at Washington.

As a lecturer Dr. Barton was able, convincing and entertaining. In his writings he pursued diversified fields. Besides five works on Lincoln and four books on "Safed and the Sage," he wrote "The Life of Clara Barton," "My Faith in Immorality," a life of Christ, and several score other volumes, relating principally to religious subjects.

Five children were born to him and Mrs. Barton, who died shortly after a trip around the world with her husband in 1925. Besides those mentioned there were two other sons, Fred B. Barton and Robert S. Barton. A daughter, Helen, became the wife of Clyde S. Stillwell.

Big Rum Seizure Made Aboard Ship

Customs Men Find 330 Demijohns of Bacardi in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Hidden in a tank aboard the freighter Munloyal, of the Munson Steamship Co., customs inspectors yesterday discovered 330 gallon demijohns of Bacardi rum valued at $7,000, and prepared today for more extensive search of the vessel. The freighter arrived Thursday with a cargo of refined sugar from Havana.

The Federal authorities said the seizure was not in the nature of a prohibition raid, but merely the capture of undeclared goods. They did not expect to find more contraband but they "were taking no chances."

A hearing will be arranged tomorrow at which Charles H. Holsman, collector of customs, will try to fix responsibility for the presence of the contraband. Capt. H. B. Pluck is in command of the freighter, and the line's agents said he and the other officers would be produced when called for by the customs men.

The haul was described by the officers as one of the largest of its find in recent years at this port.

Rumrunners of St. Pierre Rushing Yuletide Cargoes

Armada of Tiny French Isles Prepares to Start 1,500,000 Bottles of Whisky to Atlantic Seaboard to Provide Holiday Cheer in States.

Montreal, Dec. 7 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—In the last lonely citadel of the rumrunners—St. Pierre, the little archipelago of French islands lost in the fogs 12 miles off the southern coast of Newfoundland—they are hustling to give "dry America" (L'Amerique seche, they laughingly call it) the best Christmas yet, so far as "Yuletide cheer" is concerned. The greatest rum armada in the history of the islands is getting ready to sail for the Atlantic seaboard with approximately 1,500,000 bottles of whisky to run the Coast Guard's blockade on dark nights.

The forerunner of the Christmas rush was nothing less than a large cabin yacht from Detroit which loaded every cabin full of the choicest liquors in St. Pierre's little granite-girdled haven at the unbelievably cheap prices that prevail there where the best Scotch from Scotland, the best rye from Canada and the best gin from England can be obtained for $1 a quart. With every cranny packed with whisky and French champagne at $1.25 a quart, this smart craft sailed boldly up the Atlantic and through the Great Lakes to Detroit, where it tied up to a private dock and unloaded its cargo safely.

Since August the distillery agents at St. Pierre have been increasing the storage capacity for liquor. Two huge new cement liquor warehouses for two Canadian firms, capable of holding from 250,000 to 300,000 cases, were completed this month.

But storage space is still at a premium. Every available room and cellar in private houses has been rented by the whisky firms since the [illegible] the wishes of Washington and stopped liquor export from Canada. Thwarted on the Detroit River and the Great Lakes, the Canadian distillers took advantage of the St. Pierre lowhole.

Official figures for 1924 show the entire Canadian liquor export trade for the year to be worth approximately $16,000,000. In the first six months of this year, since Canada has begun to switch its contraband liquor trade through the French islands Canadian government figures show that close to $8,000,000 worth of intoxicating liquors have been sent across to St. Pierre alone.

Stocks available for Christmas shipments to thirsty America now are estimated at 5,500,000 quart bottles.

To every demand of the United States administration for checking the trade, the French administration has strongly countered. First, Washington asked for export figures, and "officially" the administration warned captains to see that their manifests were in order. Next, Washington asked permission to keep an observer on the island and a firm refusal was given.

So the 3,000 people of St. Pierre, including the 540 fishermen descended from Norman forebears on Dog Island (Isle Aux Chiens), a bleak rocky sort of cork in the neck of the harbor, are happy at the approach of this Christmas time. Whisky has meant money, and otherwise it would have been hardship. For the fisheries this year were a complete failure.

But "dry America" came like a wreath of holly.

Basel's Rhine River Harbor Makes Record

Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The Rhine harbor of Basel, handling 1,000,000 tons of freight up to November 1, is one of the few institutions in Switzerland which have not suffered from economic depression.

The 1,000,000 tons in the first ten months of 1930 compared with 510,000 tons in 1929 and 370,000 tons in 1928. The traffic was about evenly divided between the Rhine-Rhone Canal to Lyons and other points in France and the Rhine route itself to Strasbourg and down to the sea.

Bay State Sportsman Lets Mink Bite Nose

Pittsfield, Mass., Dec. 7.—Clarence Bousquet, well-known sportsman, who is raising mink on his South Mountain farm, reached into a pen this week to catch the sire of the lot and the mink grabbed Mr. Bousquet by the nose.

The sharp teeth cut into the nose like razors and stayed. Not wishing to injure the mink, which is worth several hundred dollars, Mr. Bousquet leaned against a nearby wall and waited for the mink to release its hold. It did after two or three minutes. The minutes seemed like years Mr. Bousquet says. Hereafter he will wear a nose guard when he goes near the pens.

STOCKS HIGH DESPITE BREAK, FISHER HOLDS

Price Level Now Declared 208 Per Cent Above Pre-War

Plateau Is That of 1926-1928; Many Leading Shares Show High Rate of Dividends and Surpluses; Business Keeps Valuation Up.

By IRVING FISHER,
(Professor of Economics, Yale University).

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 30.—Present misfortunes are always hardest to bear. Past calamities are memories, growing fainter. But a business depression, as it grows protracted, becomes less endurable the nearer it reaches its end. In this state of mind the president of a school of accounting and finance has written me, calling attention to my article "A Permanently Higher Stock Market," which was published January 6, 1929. He says:

"The heading is 'Bull Market Has Sound Economic Basis; Stocks To Stay At High Level.' One of the high spots in this article is as follows: 'Any one who expects them to come back to such (prewar) levels will be rudely undeceived. I am of the opinion that the printer made a mistake in setting up the word 'undeceived.'"

"As I read this article I am obliged to smile because conditions now are so wholly different from your prophecies. It is easy to build up logical economic theories, but the world has yet to produce an economist who can do more than guess as to what the future holds in store in the turns of economic developments."

My correspondent evidently assumes that the stock market crash and the further fall in stocks a year later have carried the price index below the 1913 level. Yet a glance at the accompanying chart will show that the level of stock prices, as shown by the Dow Jones and Standard Statistics indexes of common industrials, is still 112 per cent above the next preceding plateau, extending from 1915 to 1924; further, that plateau was 45 per cent above the prewar plateau which prevailed between 1905 and 1914; moreover, the prewar plateau, stood 33 per cent above the plateau of 1899 to 1904, which, in turn, had risen by 20 per cent above the long plateau beginning in 1872 and ending in 1898.

That is, after the stock market crash and the further deflation of the stock market up to December, 1930, the present level of common industrial stock prices shows a rise above the war level about two and one-third times greater than the next greatest rise, namely, from the prewar level to the war level. Stock prices today are nearly three times as high as they were before the war and four and three-quarters times as high as the 1872-1898 level. In order to get down to the prewar level of stock prices, we should now have to endure the effects of a stock deflation nearly three times as intense as that experienced during 1929 and 1930.

My correspondent's misconception illustrates the enormous exaggeration of the extent of the break in the stock market which exists in the minds of many who have felt its impact. It illustrates the prevailing under-estimation, during the current pessimism, of the tremendous increase in valuation of the Nation's underlying securities which occurred during and since the war. This increase has been reduced only about one-half by the slump in stock prices of 45 per cent during the break of 1929-1930.

Prewar Basis Improbable.

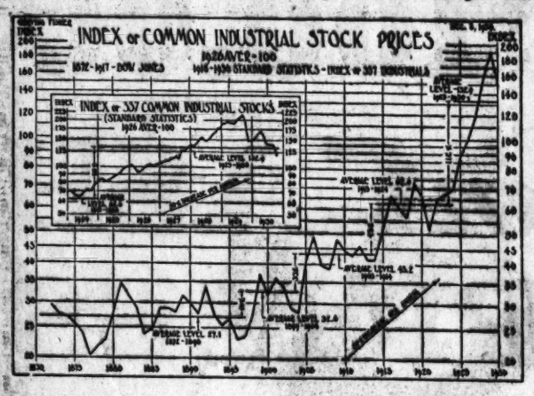
I, therefore, repeat what I said in January, 1929, that any one who expects a recession in stock prices to the prewar levels is destined to be undeceived.

There are substantial reasons why the general plateau of the stock market is still 208 per cent above the plateau of 1905-1914, and vastly above any previous plateau.

For one thing, between 1913 and 1926 there had been a 40 per cent rise in the commodity price level. This higher price level not only increased dollar earnings in proportion, but poured a disproportionate value into the common stock equities at the expense of preferred stocks and bonds, the dollar returns on which could not expand. After 1926 the growth in value of common stocks was accelerated because the increased earnings were plowed back into business at an accelerated rate. Revolutionary changes in machines and methods increased output per worker and per dollar investment at unprecedented rates and raised the estimates of future earnings and of common-stock values.

Enormous research laboratories had been erected by the leading industries. Better business management cut down costs. Mergers brought still further economies. Industrial peace between capital and labor was generally maintained and has continued throughout the present depression, with few exceptions. The Nation had grown more sober and productive. In addition, between 1922 and July, 1929, the purchasing power of the dollar in terms of commodities had become fairly stabilized, and stable money benefits business.

Even during the depression, which placed business at the disadvantage of a rapidly falling level of commodity prices, the yields of many common stocks have been maintained well above interest rates, while dividends have been kept well below earnings. The fact that good stocks will now more than pay their carrying charges has led to an investment demand that has been extremely helpful during the present period of liquidation. In the case of certain market leaders the yield has risen so high, as computed on the basis of the last cash dividends, that investors have properly become doubtful whether dividends will be continued at present levels. In other cases, of course, yields are so low as to indicate that investors expect larger returns at some later period. Each case must be taken on its own merits.



Notwithstanding the crash of 1929 and further deflation of 1930, the price-index of common industrial stocks is still well above the average level of 1925-30, and this level stands above the prewar level of 1905-14 by 208 per cent.

Many Earnings Above Yields.

But a comparison of current dividends with latest per share earnings shows that many companies are earning far above their yields, as the following table shows:

	Rate of Earnings to Dividends Per Cent
Standard Oil of N. J.	476
Anaconda Copper	344
Atlantic Refining	307
Kennecott Copper	278

The decline in price that has taken place since the break has increased the yield on stocks materially. With present low interest rates it is now possible to buy sound common stocks on which the dividends are well covered, and make an income profit on the transaction. The Nation's business is still more valuable than it has been during any period anterior to the last five years. Most industrial stock prices are now abundantly deflated. The end of the business depression will be reached when demand catches up with supply and the commodity price level turns upward. A deal of quiet reinvestment has been going on which has laid the foundations for renewed prosperity.

Useful, but Not Wealth.

Useful, material things which are not appropriated do not come under the head of wealth. Rain, wind, clouds, the Gulf stream, the heavenly bodies, are all useful and all material, but are not directly appropriated, and so are not rated to be wealth as commonly understood.

STOCKS SLIDE OFF AFTER GOOD RALLY

No Gain Recorded in Week's Movement; Seven Groups Change 1 Per Cent.

PUBLIC NOT INTERESTED

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

The 4 per cent gain in industrial stock prices for the first three sessions of last week were of no avail, as the price level slid off during the last three sessions to show a gain of but 0.4 per cent over the week.

The stock price movement last week was not specialized, as the groups in general moved in line with the all-industrials index and closed last week with no change.

The groups of coppers, household products, motors, radio, building supplies and electrical equipment made the most spectacular gains in the three-day advance, advancing by from 5 to 8 per cent each. The groups of farm machinery, machinery, tobaccos, miscellaneous and preferred stocks and rails were slow in the advance, gaining by less than 3 per cent each.

Off Nearly 2 Per Cent.

The slump in stock prices that followed on the heels of this optimistic opening brought the level of the market off by nearly 2 per cent for the Wednesday and Thursday sessions. The break became more acute on Friday, but was cut short by a sharp rally, so that at Friday's close the index was off by only 0.6 per cent from the preceding day's close.

Losses were suffered by radio and theaters, auto accessories, coppers, electrical equipment, building supplies and stores by from 5 to 7 per cent in the late-week break; while foods, tobaccos and preferred stocks withstood the attacks, losing by 2 per cent each, or less.

Only seven of the twenty groups closed last week with changes of more than 1 per cent. The coppers group closed last week up by 1.8 per cent, farm machinery off by 2.1 per cent, foods up by 1.7 per cent, household goods up by 2.2 per cent, motors up by 2.4 per cent, radios off by 1.3 per cent and utilities off by 1.1 per cent.

Common Industrial Values Drop.

Values traded on the New York Stock Exchange continue to show that public interest is absent and that professional traders are less active. The average daily values traded in common industrial stocks dropped by 28 per cent last week to $47,400,000. This is a decline of 17 per cent from the previous 1930 low of $57,400,000 for the week ended August 8, and is the low since the week ended May 25, 1928.

The all-stocks values traded were off by 25 per cent last week to $63,800,000. This is the low for this year, 17 per cent below the previous low of $76,600,000 for the week ended August 8.

The motors group alone showed increased tradings last week, with a rise of $250,000.

The remaining groups were off by from $36,700 in the building supplies group to $2,870,000 in the stores group.

The stores, steels, miscellaneous, radio, electrical equipment, coppers and utilities groups each were off by more than $1,500,000.

Foreign Stocks Move Diversely.

Reacting from the preceding week's sharp decline, Berlin stock prices regained last week nearly all their lost ground, with the weekly index increased by 5.1 per cent.

The Paris stock index also moved up, showing a gain of 1.5 per cent. Although this gain was slight, it more than counteracted the loss of the preceding week, and held the index to an upward trend from the first week of November.

The London market continued to show a stock price decline, appearing obstinate in the face of the gains on the other foreign exchanges. The index dropped to 91.4, only 0.33 per cent above the year's low for the week ended October 17.

No Change in Closing of Industrials.

The price indexes of graded industrial groups closed last week less than 1 per cent above the preceding week's close, with the week's average indicating a slight decline in the trend movement.

The investment group was the least active, advancing from November 28 to December 2 by 3.9 per cent, but reversed the movement and closed the week with only small gain.

Semiinvestment and speculative groups moved in line with the high-grade stocks, showing gains of 4.2 per cent and 4.3 per cent, respectively, on December 2, over the preceding week's close. Both groups closed last week with 4 per cent losses from the week's high.

Below are shown index numbers of prices of common industrials on the New York Stock Exchange, arranged in classes derived from Moody's ratings.

Probably the greatest degree of accuracy ever attained in commercial measurements is on the mint scales employed by the Federal Government in Philadelphia and San Francisco. These scales weigh accurately to within about one part in two million.

BOND PRICE LEVELS ARE ON DOWN TREND

New Low Is Struck for 1930, Railroads Being the Chief Offenders.

ALL GAINS WIPED OUT

(Irving Fisher Service.)

The price-levels of bonds, striking a new low for 1930 on December 5, have not suffered so great a decline, in general, as the figures might indicate. The all-bonds index on that date, 99.73, fell by 0.1 per cent below the low established on January 2. The foreign government index of prices fell off by less than 0.1 per cent over the week; those off by less than 0.2 per cent were U. S. Government and public utilities; and industrials saw a decrease of less than 0.3 per cent.

Chiefly responsible, then, for the sharp decline in the Irving Fisher all-bond index are rails, both first and second grade, the latter being the more flagrant offender, setting up new lows twice before the week's close. These groups were off by 1.0 per cent and 2.2 per cent, respectively, over the week, pulling the all-bond index down by 0.8 per cent. Price drops were recorded by all but one of the twenty stocks in the two rails groups, whereas only a minority of the 50 stocks in the other groups declined.

The continuous downtrend of the all-bond index, which set in after the Thanksgiving holiday, more than erases gains made during the two weeks prior to that time.

The value of tradings increased by 2.1 per cent. Here again, rails were the moving factor, as the figures show industrials steady in trading, with slightly increased values in the remaining groups.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—New municipal bond issues scheduled for award this week aggregate $24,789,351, representing financing of 54 communities, the bond buyer reports. The total compares with offerings last week of $22,840,000 in this class last week. Among the larger issues are $10,000,000 State of South Carolina highway bonds to be awarded tomorrow, $4,184,000 Baltimore, Md., 4 per cent building, paving and airport bonds, to be placed Friday, and an issue of $1,300,000 Massachusetts 3½ and 4 per cent sewage and water supply bonds to be placed Monday.

Directors of Duplan Silk Corporation have authorized purchase of not exceeding 50,000 shares of the company's common stock. The corporation also is asking for tenders for the sale to it of additional preferred stock at $105 per share and accrued dividends and for the sale to the corporation of common stock at $14.75 a share. The offer expires December 15.

The bottom of the depression has been passed and improvement, gradual though it doubtless will be, is ahead, The Review, published by the Bank of America N. A. The bank points out that the beginning of an upward movement in business, after prolonged depression, is almost imperceptible and that as yet it is impossible to judge how early in the year such a recovery is to be anticipated.

Formation of Chain Store Shareowners, Inc., a semifixed investment trust for the common stocks of 35 standard chain store companies, was announced today by Charles E. Merrill, of Merrill, Lynch & Co., investment bankers who have participated in financing for 17 companies.

FISK RUBBER FIRM WILL REORGANIZE

Company Takes Steps Toward Restoring Depleted Working Capital.

THREE GROUPS FORMED

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Steps toward a reorganization of the Fisk Rubber Co., whose working capital has been so depleted by the business depression that it finds impracticable a refunding of an $8,199,500 issue of 5½ per cent notes maturing January 1, were announced here today.

Three protective committees, representing holders of the company's stocks, bonds and notes, are being formed, and with them the management, said H. T. Dunn, president, will try to work out a reorganization which will maintain the company's position in the industry and restore its credit and earning power.

The committees, the announcement said, have requested the deposit of securities, and it is their belief the interests of all classes of holders "can best be represented" by them.

Expenses Radically Reduced.

"Operations of the company during the year," said Mr. Dunn, have been influenced by the need of maintaining as liquid a position as possible in view of the 5½ per cent note maturity. To this end two of its fabric plants were closed and tire manufacturing at its Western plant at Cudahy, Wis., was discontinued early in June. Also through a drastic reorganization in all departments, expenses have been radically reduced. Inventories and commitments are sufficient only for the immediate needs of operation.

"It is estimated that for the year ending December 31 operating loss, including write-down of inventories but before depreciation, interest and special reserves, will approximate $2,000,000, and after depreciation of $2,000,000, interest, &c., of $1,700,000, additional accounts receivable reserve of $500,000, and reserve for contingencies, will result in a total loss for the year of approximately $6,700,000. As of December 31, it is estimated that the company will show current assets of $17,000,000 with cash of over $3,000,000 and current liabilities of approximately $3,700,000, including the $8,199,500 5½ per cent notes, and current accounts payable of $300,000.

On Deflated Basis.

"The company will enter the new year on a deflated basis and with its car equipment and its domestic and foreign dealer connections intact."

Fisk Rubber has outstanding $19,188,800 7 per cent first preferred stock; $926,000 in second preferred, and 1,717,009 shares of common. Its funded debt, in addition to the maturing notes, comprises $37,870,000 first mortgage 8 per cent bonds, due in 1941, and $1,000,000 in subsidiary first mortgage 6½s, due in 1935.

Asking and Bidding In Market Explained

In order that there may be a price, it is not necessary that the exchange in question shall actually take place. It may be only a contemplated exchange. A real estate agent often has an "asking price;" that is, a price at which he tries to sell. This is usually above the price of any actual sale which may occur later. In the same way, there is often a "bidding price," which is usually below the price of actual sale. Hence, the price of actual sale usually lies between the price first bid and the price first asked.

COMMODITY PRICE LEVEL IS UP AGAIN

Trend Toward Serious Decline Appears Halted by Better Market.

NEW LOWS IN EUROPE

After two weeks of decline, the Irving Fisher wholesale commodity price index last week turned upward by 0.12 per cent, thus bringing the index to a mark of 80.7 (1926 equals 100). The weakness in commodity prices that began the week-end of November 22, followed a period of nearly three months of comparative steadiness, so that economists feared a resumption of serious decline. With last week's result, this movement has lost its impetus: Last week's increase followed a drop of 1.7 per cent for the week ended November 22, and a less acute drop of 0.25 per cent for the week ended November 29.

The purchasing power of the wholesale dollar, in view of the rise in the commodity level, fell by 0.16 per cent. In other words, the value of the dollar last week was 23.9 cents above the 1926 dollar.

English-French Prices at New Lows.

Commodity price levels in England and France dropped by 1.26 per cent and 0.52 per cent, respectively, last week, showing increasing weakness, with the indexes for both countries at the year's low. The index for England was 70.8, and that for France was 77.1 (1926 equals 100). Last week's break in England was the most severe since late in July, while the drop in France was the sharpest since the second week in October.

The situation in Germany was more optimistic last week, since the index dropped by only 0.11 per cent to 90.3. The movement is slight when compared with the drop of 0.88 per cent the preceding week.

Raw Materials Weakest Group.

The group indexes, in general, last week were firm, making slight gains from their recent lows. The semimanufactured and finished goods indexes rose by 0.80 per cent and 0.24 per cent, respectively, last week, following no change in semimanufactured goods and a drop of 0.48 per cent in finished goods the preceding week. Copper, butter, lard and pork were largely responsible for the rise in these two groups in a fairly stable market.

Raw materials were the weak spot in last week's market. This index dropped by 0.13 per cent to a new low of 78.0, with coffee, cotton, eggs, beef and hogs largely responsible for the drop. The decline in the price level of these commodities was sufficient to outweigh the gains of wheat, corn, oats, hides, silk and potatoes.

Agricultural products dropped by 0.77 per cent to the year's low of 76.9. Farm products were off by 0.12 per cent and foodstuffs up by 0.82 per cent.

Nonagricultural prices rose by 0.25 per cent following no change during the preceding week. The fuel, building materials and miscellaneous groups alone showed weakness from the preceding week's level, while the textiles and chemicals were steady, metal products up by 0.78 per cent and hides up by 0.91 per cent.

The purchasing power of farm products continued to show weakness, dropping by 1.04 per cent last week.

TESTS MAY REVEAL SECRET OF CREATION

Creature in Tube Brought Into Being by Use of Scientific Means.

NO NATURAL PROCESSES

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The secret of life, for which science has been searching for years, may lie in a test tube in the biological laboratory of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, over which the noted scientist, Dr. G. W. Crile, is the guiding genius.

A reporter was able today to catch a glimpse of the unnamed thing that promises to verify certain radical scientific theories concerning the nature of the force called life.

This promise will be fulfilled if the creature that lives and breathes in the biologist's test tube here, a thing without parents, and born in defiance of all accepted and recognized processes of procreation, does not disappoint its human creators.

From one person who has assisted in the experiment, from its inception, there came the reluctant statement that "something approximating life" has been produced by mechanical means.

Expect Report Soon.

Dr. Lower, partner in Dr. Crile's work, expressed the opinion that Dr. Crile would be prepared to lay his facts before the American Society for the Advancement of Science, which meets here during Christmas Week.

In simple language, this correspondent's understanding of what has taken place in Dr. Crile's laboratory is as follows:

Brain tissues, taken from a freshly killed animal, were reduced to ashes by electrical heat. From the resulting substance, certain salts and other elements were obtained. To this substance was added protein and perhaps some other elements and chemicals. The whole then was treated electrically. Before the eyes of the scientists there appeared "something" with all the characteristics, or nearly all, of a living cell or protozoa.

Capable of Moving.

This "thing" possessed the power of locomotion. It also possessed and utilized the power of procreation by fission or cell division. It fed upon the protein in the test tube, consuming it as other unicellular animals do their nourishment.

In addition to this it was found that the "thing" was susceptible to narcotics, becoming dormant when subjected to certain drugs and later recovering.

It was declared that, owing to the care taken in the experiment, no living thing could possibly have entered the ingredients of the concoction.

Anniversary Programs to Honor Joel Chandler Harris in South.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The literary South Tuesday will pay tribute to the genius of Joel Chandler Harris, the "Uncle Remus" of Negro folk lore, on the occasion of the eighty-second anniversary of his birth.

In school playlets, reading and memorial programs, 'Brer Rabbit will fight again with the tar baby and 'Brer Possum will head straight for his favorite persimmon patch.

The lead in the anniversary observance will be taken here by the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, Harris' Atlanta home. The Sign of the Wren's Nest, will be open to the public.

Four Robbers Escape From Colorado Prison

Canon City, Colo., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Four convicts serving long-time sentences for robbery, escaped from the State Penitentiary early tonight, scaling a prison wall which fronts on the main street of Canon City.

The missing men are James E. Kelley, 38, serving 10 to 14 years, from Denver, for robbery; Jack Flood, 28, serving 9 to 10 years, from Denver County, for robbery; Ernest Hertzke, 26, serving 20 to 25 years, from Boulder County, for robbery, and Wilbur Zelick, 29, serving 30 to 35 years, from Saguache County, for robbery. Penitentiary guards were searching the surrounding country tonight for the escaped men.

OLE MISS STUDENTS BURN BILBO'S EFFIGY

plantation tonight and no statement had been obtained from him.

The effigy was discovered while being hoisted in flames to the top of a flagpole, witnesses told newspapers. It was not learned who started the blaze, but soon hundreds of university students gathered, many running from their dormitory rooms and others coming from a campus dance, escorting girls from the Mississippi State College for Women.

An estimated 250 students milled about as the effigy, made of pajamas apparently stuffed with cotton, burned, witnesses said.

The University of Mississippi and several other State-operated colleges in Mississippi, was recently dropped by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools from its accredited lists of schools because of what the association describes as political interference by Gov. Bilbo.

Carey Stovall, president of the student body of the university, said in dent body would acquiesce in what his opinion the majority of the stuhe termed the display of disapproval, but however, he went on to say:

"While the dismissal of the university from the Southern Association is regrettable the thing for Ole Miss students to do is to go to work and make an honest effort to regain the rating lost."

Dr. J. C. Seeler, vice chancellor of the university, said tonight he did not believe the incident was representative of the attitude of the student body toward the governor.

"There is no concerted feeling against the governor," Dr. Seeler said, "although, of course, in some individual cases among the students such feeling may exist."

Both Dr. Seeler and Cary Stovall, president of the university student body, said their information was that fewer than 100 students actually participated in the borning.

SUPPORT OF STRIKE AT DANVILLE ASKED

Labor Chief Recites Urgent Need of Funds to Keep Up Struggle.

MINERS' POSITION TOLD

Danville, Va., Dec. 7.—The executive board of the Virginia Federation of Labor, twelve of whose fourteen members from all quarters of Virginia assembled here this afternoon to discuss the textile strike, decided just before adjournment to issue another appeal to organized labor of the United States and Canada to support the cause of the United Textile Workers. The petition is to be sent to Washington, where William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will be asked to disseminate it over his indorsement. It states the continued urgent need of funds to support the strike.

The meeting this evening was executive and a committee composed of E. T. Bowden, of Richmond; L. F. Graves, of Norfolk, and J. M. Gilgalian, of Hopewell, was appointed to issue a statement summarizing as many of the matters discussed as it deemed of public interest. The statement issued reiterated the uselessness of Gov. Pollard in sending soldiers here, but no further protest is being made to it.

Militia Not Objected To.

"We don't mind their being here," said Bowden, amplifying the statement. "It is for the citizens of the State now paying the bill to protest if they wish to."

The statement further asserted "the fact that county enforcement officers refused to fulfill their oath of office did not warrant the sending of troops."

The board criticized a portion of the State press, especially the Danville papers, "for being unfair." The eviction of workers was dealt with at the meeting. The action of the mill management is characterized in the statement as being "persecution, heartless, cruel and harsh," and against pitifully underpaid and helpless human beings. Finally the board went on record commending the strikers for their "orderliness and excellent conduct during the trying period."

Thatfinancial aspects of the strikers are understood to have been gone into exhaustively by the board this evening though nothing was said about it in the prepared statement.

Norman Thomas Speaker.

The board adjourned its session to attend a mass meeting of the strikers held in Dansylvania Hall and so largely attended that a repeat meeting was held at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Norman J. Thomas, Socialist candidate for Governor of New York, was the principal speaker at the mass meeting, hurrying over from Duke University, where he spoke last night when it was discovered that W. C. Birthright, who was to speak, could not be here. Thomas was given an ovation. He is chairman of the emergency strike relief, a philanthropic group outside organized labor which has so far contributed $2,000 to the Danville strike and who said his organization will continue to give aid as long as it is necessary. He urged the strikers to hold firm and to carry on "despite the merciless attitude of the company." He added it was good to know that these men "who are supposed to be Christian gentlemen will show their spirit to the world by putting workers out of their houses on Christmas Eve."

Gorman, who also made addresses at the meetings today and tonight, has called all former service men who are members of the union to meet next week.

Rebels' Bombs Seized By Portuguese Police

Lisbon, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Continuing their investigation into an alleged revolutionary plot, disclosed in the discovery within the last few days of almost 200 bombs in various parts of the city, police today seized five machine guns and ammunition at the fertilizer factory of the Commercial Agricultural Alliance.

The owner of the factory, Candido Alves Ribeiro, was arrested. The police charge the guns were obtained by Louis Maia Monteiro, who at present is ill at the prison hospital. Extending their investigation into the provinces, the police seized 43 sticks of dynamite at Oporto, together with cartridges and chlorate of potassium.

Italy's Youth Pay Honor To Country's Boy Hero

Genoa, Italy, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The youth of today celebrated the festival of the greatest urchin in Italian history, Balilla, who on December 5, 1746, led his fellow citizens in driving the invading Austrians out of the port of Genoa. The festival, which normally falls on a weekday, was celebrated today so that no time would be lost from work or school.

The Fascist Boy Scout organization, the National Order of Balilla, has taken its name from the street-boy of Genoa, Giovanni Battista Perasso, who has gone down to fame by his nickname of Balilla.

FOLLOWERS OF HUNT TO GIVE HORSE SHOW

Event Will Be Staged at Riding and Hunt Club on Friday Evening.

MAJ. GRYMES IS AT HEAD

For the purpose of arousing interest among local horsemen and horsewomen in its biweekly fox and drag hunts, the Washington Riding and Hunt Club will stage a horse show Friday evening in the Hunt Club, Twenty-second and P streets northwest.

The Hunt Club, every year from September 1 to January 1, has two outings a week, one a fox hunt and the other a drag hunt. It is to stimulate the attendance at these events that Friday's show will be given.

The committee in charge is headed by Maj. William Grymes, U. S. A., and includes Chester Gwynn and Percy Niepold. The subcommittee in charge of tickets and refreshments is headed by Mrs. Frank M. Andrews, and that in charge of publicity and prizes by Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning, jr.

A feature of Friday's show will be the hunt team event. In this the men will wear their scarlet coats and peaked caps and the women formal hunt clothes and silk top hats. They will take the jumps three abreast.

Fugitive Spanish Flier Boomed for Deputy Post

Madrid, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Maj. Ramon Franco, missing Spanish aviator, who escaped from a Madrid prison, is being boomed as a Republican candidate to the Chamber of Deputies in the March elections. His candidacy is being advocated by Republicans, advanced Liberals and Liberal-Socialists in Madrid, Valencia, Barcelona and Bilbao. These cities usually return large Republican majorities.

Election to Parliament will permit the return of Franco to Spain under the cloak of immunity given congressmen against arrest for political offenses. Franco's arrest resulted from newspaper writings in which he criticized the government.

SANTA CLAUS LIVES; TOY FUND AIDS HIM

you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith, then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders that are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

"No Santa Claus! Thank God! He lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

To continue that faith in Santa Claus, so dear to the heart of Washington children, The Post this year is asking contributions to a Christmas Toy Fund. It will be used to make happy boys and girls who otherwise might be forgotten. What more need be said? Send in your check today.

Police Asked to Help Locate Missing Girl

Mrs. Virgie Norton, of 4216 Thirty-first street, Mount Rainier, Md., yesterday requested Washington police to institute a search for her daughter, Frances C. Norton, 17 years old, who has been missing from her home since December 5.

She is described as being 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighing 100 pounds. She has dark brown hair and blue eyes, and when last seen was wearing a black coat and hat.

LINDSEY IS EJECTED AT CHURCH SERVICE

Judge Beaten in Cathedral After Verbal Attack on Bishop Manning.

POLICE THEN SEIZE HIM

ciation of "a man who stands openly for legalized free love under cover of the term 'companionate marriage.'"

He turned his back to the congregation and bowed his head in prayer.

The Denver champion of companionate marriage strode forward and leaped upon a table just below the pulpit in which the bishop still intoned the ascription.

"Bishop Manning," he cried, his voice electrifying the thousands who had been listening to the bishop's exoriation, "you have falsely represented me! This is not a house of justice! It is not a house of God! In justice I ask for five minutes to answer your unfair attack."

The prayer of the Bishop of the Diocese of New York was drowned by the voice of the former children's court judge of Denver. The bishop remained with his back to the pews.

Two ushers sprang forward, pulling Lindsey from the table. The cathedral, one of the most famous churches of the world, buzzed with the voices of richly garbed women and men in morning dress.

A hundred or more men and women arose in their seats, pushed into the aisles and rushed forward.

A man's voice cried: "Punch him."

Another man struck Lindsey on the head.

Profanity was heard. The aisle leading toward the press table, at which Lindsey had been sitting and on which he had leaped, filled with pushing, excited worshipers.

Every one seemed to have forgotten that the church was in prayer; every one save Bishop Manning who, his back still to his congregation, continued his petition for divine blessing.

The words of prayer were drowned in the hubbub, above which rose the voice of Lindsey, crying:

"He lied about me. He had no right to lie about me! This is no house of justice! This is no house of God!"

No voice was raised to silence the uproar. The bishop himself remained occupied with his prayer. An effort by reporters seated at the press table to halt the confusion failed.

With his escort of ushers, the Denver advocate of companionate marriage was hustled to a side door. Behind him surged the crowd of men and women. At the top of a wooden stairway leading to the ground, four detectives broke through in time to save Lindsey from being pushed headlong upon them.

A woman screamed, "Lynch him!" The detectives pushed the crowd back, threatening arrests. Thirty or more persons broke through and followed on the long walk to the police cab in front of the great stone church. They continued their angry shouts.

Bishop Withholds Charge.

Finally Detective Lieut. Flood turned and threatened to arrest the next man who spoke.

Lindsey was rushed to the 100th street police station and held there until the arrival of his attorney, Arthur Garfield Hays. The police at first were going to hold him for $500 bail. Hays persuaded them to release his client on his own recognizance.

Inside the church, when order was restored, Bishop Manning called for an unprogramed hymn, "Fight the Good Fight." The organist could not immediately find the music.

The congregation broke into prolonged applause. There were shouts of "God bless Bishop Manning." It was the second time in history that applause had been heard in the great cathedral and the first time at an actual service. Communion followed.

Asked by police to lodge a charge, Bishop Manning replied:

"I will make no charge." A police officer, however, permitted his name to be used as complaining witness on a summons for Lindsey to answer a charge of disorderly conduct in court tomorrow morning.

Will Subpena Bishop.

Attorney Hays said he would cause a subpena to be issued for the bishop to appear tomorrow. Hays also was trying to get into touch with Attorney Clarence Darrow to ask his aid. Darrow was in New York.

Judge Lindsey said that if he had been allowed to continue his challenge to Bishop Manning, he intended to say:

"You read my telegram and my letter to you giving my side of the case, and if you are not sportsman enough to let me be heard you have no right to hit beneath the belt, even if you are a bishop."

He wrote the lines during the bishop's sermon, he said. What he objected to most, he told reporters, was the bishop's remarks about his disbarment by the Supreme Court of Colorado.

Judge Lindsey said it was the second time in his career he had been arrested. He was arrested fifteen years ago in Denver for what he called "refusal to betray the confidence of a boy charged with murder." He was convicted for contempt of court.

In his sermon Bishop Manning denied he had forbidden Lindsey's speech before the New York Churchmen's League and held his objection to have been legitimate.

Liberal Group Blamed.

"There is in this diocese a little group of clergymen who, with a motive I do not venture to say, have been doing whatever lay in their power to make difficulties for their bishop and to place him publicly in embarrassing situations.

"This group is a very small one relatively to the whole number of our clergy. It figures little when our diocese gathers in convention, but it figures largely in the newspapers and it has the constant and active support of a religious journal miscalled liberal.

"It is time for this unseemly agitation to cease."

Judge Lindsey was accompanied at the church by Symon Gould, director of the League of Public Discussion, his New York manager.

Mr. Gould said: "Judge Lindsey will speak December 20. If Bishop Manning appears and wishes to answer the address we promise him he will not be ejected or arrested."

Lindsey Tells His Version.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Former Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who was forcibly ejected from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City today, said on his arrival here tonight that he was sorry he interrupted the prayer of Bishop Manning. He said, however, he was not sorry he endeavored to be given a hearing at the cathedral service.

"I did not meant to interrupt the prayer," he said. "I thought Bishop Manning had finished speaking. I thought he had seen me down there in front and was trying to get away. But it would have happened anyway. They had me spotted. They had four plainclothes men there, and the ushers were waiting for me.

"I was not familiar with the ceremony. In my church (Methodist Episcopal) at Denver the preacher does not pray when he finishes preaching. I did not know the bishop was praying. I stood up and demanded to be heard. I said: 'If this is not a house of justice, it is not a house of God.' Then they grabbed me. Someone hit me on the head."

Calls Reference Unjust.

Lindsey said Bishop Manning's reference to himself was "vitriolic, unjust and vicious."

"I had a right to be heard," Lindsey continued. "Since the bishop misrepresented me, justice demanded I be given the right to reply. The whole thing is immaterial to me. It is evident he did not propose I be given a hearing."

The former judge produced a subpoena ordering him to appear in magistrate's court in New York tomorrow afternoon. He has a speaking engagement at Scranton, Pa., tomorrow night, and he feared his arraignment would make him late in reaching the Pennsylvania city.

SLEMP IS DIRECTING U. S. SHOW AT PARIS

French Will Open Big Colonial Exhibition in May of Next Year.

C. H. BURKE ASSISTANT

Paris, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A new office has been opened in the American Embassy here. Behind its desk sits C. Bascom Slemp, formerly secretary to President Coolidge. He has come to France as commissioner general of the United States to the French international colonial exposition, which is to open next May.

With Charles Henry Burke, who bears the title of commissioner, Mr. Slemp is determing what sort of representation the United States is to have at the exposition, and is preparing plans for a building to house exhibits.

These United States exhibits will embrace private business displays as well as the official government exposition of what the United States possessions are doing. In the latter, the Philippine Islands are expected to play a large part, with Hawaii, Alaska, Guam, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands also figuring. The scope of exhibitable articles includes anything related to colonization.

Six countries will have pavilions in Vincennes Park near Paris, where the exposition is to be held. They are Italy, Portugal, Belgium, Denmark, Holland and the United States. Many other countries will take part in the "Information City," where intelligence concerning colonization is to be grouped. Great Britain will figure here.

French buildings at the park are going up rapidly, some of them being facsimiles of temples and exotic structures found in French overseas possessions, such as Indo-China. The French colonial empire embraces a score of countries and islands—Morocco, Madagascar, Indo-China, Guadeloupe, Reunion, Martinique, West Africa, Equatorial Africa and thus offers wide range for such an exposition.

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

THE TREASURY RAID.

The Republican party is on trial in the matter of protecting the Treasury against pork raids in the name of unemployment and drought relief. Democrats of the House and Senate are running amuck in their demands for enormous appropriations. A few Republicans who are trying to curry favor with the farmers are joining the irresponsible party in demanding excessive appropriations. Senator Borah actually proposes a 3 per cent increase over the present income tax rate, in view of the stupendous allotments that are demanded by pork-barrel representatives and senators. The Senate coalition is fighting desperately to commit the Government to a vast and costly socialistic experiment at Muscle Shoals.

Senators and representatives whose States and districts were not affected by drought are taking the lead in a movement to raid the Treasury in the name of drought relief. Huge sums of drought relief money are to be diverted to States and districts that have not suffered at all.

It is evident that the Republican majority of the House and Republican regulars in the Senate will stand against the looting of the Treasury. Back of them is President Hoover, who may be compelled to veto so-called relief bills passed by ravenous politicians.

The House committee on appropriations has held down to $110,000,000 the proposed appropriation for increasing employment in connection with public works. President Hoover asked for $100,000,000 or $150,000,000. Some Democrats immediately demanded appropriations running up to $500,000,000. Under Chairman Wood's resolute leadership the Republicans in the House committee defeated the Democrats who insisted upon swelling the appropriation. At the same time the Republicans in the House committee on agriculture held down the drought relief appropriation to $30,000,000, against a solid Democratic vote in favor of $60,000,000.

Mr. Aswell, of Louisiana, a Democrat hailing from a State that has not suffered from drought, will lead the pork-barrel forces in an attempt to raise the appropriation to $60,000,000. He hopes that the number of Republicans who will be seduced by the prospect of pork for their districts will be sufficient to put through the Treasury raid in spite of the committee.

Democratic cooperation with the administration in the work of providing unemployment relief has been changed into an attempted raid upon the Treasury. Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, has found that the Raskob wet forces are determined to set him aside as leader, in order to facilitate the nomination of a wet candidate for the Presidency. The Raskob forces can not directly attack Senator Robinson for cooperating with President Hoover in the matter of unemployment relief, since Mr. Raskob himself was one of the signers of the famous cooperation manifesto. But the campaign by the wets to depose Mr. Robinson is in full swing, and means have been found to encourage Democrats to denounce him for cooperating with the Republicans. He has cooled perceptibly in his cooperating ardor in the face of the movement to depose him as leader. He has not gone to the extent of joining other Democrats who propose to raid the Treasury, but he has injected a partisan note into the situation that practically puts an end to the pretense of cooperation.

As Senator Robinson's plan of cooperation vanishes, the tendency of Democrats is to turn again to Senator Norris for leadership. He has led them for several years, and they like to be led.

FARMERS PUT ON NOTICE.

While Chairman Legge, of the Federal Farm Board, was telling a section of the American Bankers Association that financial ruin for the farmer would wipe out the banker, and that wheat prices probably will be lower in the next 25 years than they have been in the past 25, the full import of Secretary Hyde's analysis and estimate of the farm situation, as embodied in his annual report, was beginning to be realized by those who took the time to wade through that document. Secretary Hyde said:

> The growing efficiency of American agriculture helps to explain but does not justify its persistence in overproduction. Technical progress has increased farm productivity tremendously in the last fifteen years, but the benefit has gone largely to the consumers. Farming has been industrialized and mechanized. It has used science, decreased its production costs, and increased its output without finding either security or profit in the process. It has made two blades of grass grow where one grew before, only to find the second blade depressing the price of both. Farming is becoming more efficient all over the world, and crop acreage and live-stock breeding are increasing. The competing groups know that a halt in production will have to be called, but no group wishes to be the first to slow down.
> By this time it is evident that supply-and-demand conditions can not be set aside by legislation, that the dumping of surpluses abroad is not feasible, that the indefinite storing of surpluses tends to prevent rather than to cause a rise of prices, that tariff duties are not effective on commodities produced largely for export, and that subsidies would increase rather than restrain production. Voluntary curtailment of production is the only logical remedy for the surplus problem.

The demand for acreage curtailment has been made so frequently by the Department of Agriculture, the Federal Farm Board and other agencies that farmers can no longer plead ignorance. The responsibility for overproduction rests upon them.

The farm problem promises to come in for much discussion at the present session. Despite Chairman Legge's often-reiterated opinion that the farm act gives the Government adequate power to deal with the situation, the agricultural States are clamoring for quick relief. When the farm bill was enacted farmers generally were led to believe that their troubles were over, and they have become impatient after repeated delays. There is now a more or less general belief that the Government is impotent under the farm act to deal with the situation. As a result efforts will be made in the present session to focus attention on the debenture and the equalization fee, and a drive will be made for the enactment of one or the other of these panaceas.

Secretary Hyde's report should be kept fresh in mind for utilization as an antidote to the loose talk anent farm relief that will characterize the present session. Under the farm act the Government has power and authority to help the farmer to help himself out of his difficulties. More than this the Government can not do.

EARNING IMMORTALITY.

In the midst of wordly tumult and the growth of monstrous movements to destroy morality and religion, such as that which is debasing Russia, it is well for Americans to pause occasionally to pay tribute to the memory of men who have tried to keep faith and who have passed into the unknown. Is it well with them? Was it worth while for them to resist temptation, to live cleanly, to acknowledge God, and to leave only a good name instead of stolen wealth? "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Senator Goff, of West Virginia, took occasion yesterday at the Elks' memorial services at Charleston, W. Va., to discuss the mystery of future life. Snatching a few hours from a busy life, he devoted them to a consideration of the theme that has engrossed the minds of men from the beginning of time. In his address he sought to find support for the theory that a life well spent is preparation for immortal life—that the striving, the resistance to temptation, the steadfast faith in God which inspires good men is in fact evidence of divinity in man, which is the best assurance that immortality is not a mere dream, but a reality whose rewards can be earned.

Deep in the consciousness of man is the feeling of continuity of life—deeper than words, even deeper than thought. The influence exerted by the thoughts of men long dead is as real as the acts of living men. Men literally live beyond the grave when their influence survives. In many cases no one knows whether an immortal thought is that of a dead or a living man—it does not matter whether the fleshly wrappings are whole or whether they have withered away.

Based upon the instinctive feeling that there is a future life, the theory that striving for goodness prepares and entitles a man to enjoy immortality ought to strengthen and encourage men, besides comforting them in the belief that others who "fought the good fight" have earned their right to live eternally. Those who mourn the loss of loved ones can find solace in this thought, for they are in a position to feel the living influence of those who are deemed to be dead.

"ILL FEELING ABROAD."

Measures to halt immigration while the depression lasts do not meet with approval from the State Department. On the ground that an embargo against alien workmen might cause ill-feelings in some neighboring countries, officials of the department have indicated that they will oppose the restrictive measures before Congress. The department seems to be out of step with both President Hoover and congressional leaders.

In his message President Hoover said: "Under conditions of current unemployment it is obvious that persons coming to the United States seeking work would likely become either a direct or indirect public charge." He pointed out the need for revision of immigration laws upon a "more limited and selective basis," and declared that "the whole subject requires exhaustive reconsideration."

The President also called attention to the "temporary" restrictive measures that he initiated in the State Department to bring about an immediate curtailment of immigration. The issues of visas decreased from 24,000 to 7,000 per month after consuls had been instructed to withhold visas from applicants likely to become public charges. Had Mr. Hoover been completely satisfied with this showing, he would not have called attention to the close relationship between immigration and unemployment, and he would not have asked Congress to enact a law imposing further limitations.

The theory on which the State Department opposes further legal restrictions is very flimsy. The purpose of immigration laws is not to purchase foreign good will at the expense of American workmen, but to protect these workmen. Every immigrant who settles in the United States in times like the present displaces some American or becomes a public charge. No argument based on diplomacy can stand in the face of that fact.

President Hoover also asked that the laws for deportation of undesirable aliens be strengthened. Why does the State Department admit Communists into the United States? Would it cause ill-feeling in Russia if the reds were excluded? While Congress is on the subject of immigration and deportation it would be timely to inquire as to how and why Communists are admitted in plain defiance of the law.

Followers of Congress debates can well sympathize with residents of the Meuse Valley. There's many a fog that kills.

Excavators poking around Pompeii turn up a collection of jewels and kitchen utensils. Cooks in those days evidently were just as prosperous as they are now.

A local murderer justifies himself on the ground that his victim refused to obey the order to "Stick 'em up!" Senator Norris' ideas are bearing fruit.

THE PHILIPPINE PROBLEM

From the Illinois State Journal.

The utterances of Filipino politicians on the independence question consist mostly of fervid oratory, generalities and sentimentalism. In an address last evening before the Springfield Rotary a Filipino attorney and publicist, Vicente Villamin, presented the facts and realities of the question fairly and dispassionately. He made clear the duties and responsibilities of America in the premises on the one hand and the enlightened aspirations of the Filipino people on the other, harmonising them on the basis of identical interest and common purpose.

Immediate and complete separation from America, Mr. Villamin averred, would not give time for the inevitable political and economic readjustments and would result in general chaos that might lead to the most grievous consequences. A precipitate separation is neither necessary nor justifiable, because America, instead of oppressing or suppressing the Filipinos, is giving them all the help and opportunity to build up their country and improve the conditions of their people, thus preparing them for political independence with economic stability.

The Philippines being within our tariff wall does the major portion of her overseas commerce with the United States. That country is a foreign-trade country, the bulk of production being exportable surplus. Philippine industries are organized upon the basis of the United States tariff protection. That protection, which is the life-blood of Philippine industries, will automatically stop upon the declaration of Philippine independence. The result would be the collapse of business and industry in the islands, unemployment and misery, social upset and political disorganization. That would be disastrous to the Filipinos and dishonorable to America. The Filipinos are patriotic, but it takes more than patriotism to cope with the stern realities of the life of the masses.

Ultimate independence, according to Mr. Villamin, is the ideal to work for. He proposes a new economic orientation for the Philippines, whose objective is to build an economic structure that is independent of the American tariff. The way to accomplish it is to stop the expansion of the industries that must have the American tariff protection to live, giving them time to reorganize themselves on the basis of no-protection, and to develop the products that are on the free list and not produced in the United States, which will diversify Philippine agricultural production and strengthen the economic sinews of the Filipinos. This program, Mr. Villamin pointed out, will accelerate rather than retard the concession of independence, for America could not honorably refuse independence once the condition of stability and preparedness is created.

Insistence on immediate independence, or independence within twenty years, is heroic and would appeal to many who have not examined the different aspects of the question. The danger is if America is stampeded into a premature action the result might be such a chaotic situation in the Philippines that America might be called upon to take control again, in which event permanent control would loom as a likely possibility. This would be our probable course considering our moral obligations to the Filipinos, our national prestige and vital interests, and our duty to cooperate in the maintenance of international stability and tranquillity in the Far East.

If the United States is to live up to its pledge of honor of granting independence to the Philippines when it could be enjoyed and maintained by the Filipinos without our further aid, a program such as Mr. Villamin proposes is essential to bring about an orderly and effective execution of that pledge. America has to date acted in an upright and magnanimous manner with respect to her Philippine responsibility. Now when special interests are urging the concession of immediate independence for selfish reasons America should display not only more magnanimity but more intelligence and more firmness, intent upon doing the right and the just thing for the Filipino people.

READING AS AN ART.

That there are several million persons in the United States beyond the age of childhood who are illiterate, says the New York Times, contradicts the statement put by Shakespeare in the mouth of Dogberry, that "to read and write comes by nature." There are other millions, nominally literate, who yet read so little and with such pain that to them books are as an instrument upon which they have not learned to play. Prof. Charles H. Judd, of the University of Chicago, emphasized this in speaking on adult education at the convocation of the University of the State of New York: "Until people are ready to cultivate reading as they would cultivate the ability to play a musical instrument or to play golf they will never be able to use the best sources of information with readiness and full advantage."

Reading aloud is recognized as an art, but reading to one's own mind is also an art, which can be developed, as other arts, by incessant practice. If he were to give as much attention to the cultivation of this skill as the musician gives to his art, the artisan with leisure and a library would be richer than the man whose profession or vocation leaves him no time to read swiftly and thoughtfully in the literature which is "the organ of the race mind" and whose chief function is the fusion of nations and the "enfranchisement of the soul" of the individual.

DOUBTERS.

Some would have everything explained,
Would walk with God and touch His hand;
Hark to Him when He is pained,
For this is all they understand.

And yet if this were so and He
Were knowable they'd think Him odd.
If He were One their eyes could see
They'd not admit that He was God.

They'd say: "He smiles as you and I,
Groans in His pain, and hungers, too!
With miracles deceives the eye,
As tricksters and magicians do.

"When God we meet, when God we see,
(And only then) believe we will!"
But should such meeting come to be,
They'd doubt His claim to Godship still.

To Get a Perfect Lawn, You Merely Plant It and Then Roll It for 90 Years.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

ALL over America people are saying: "Floyd Gibbons is a lucky stiff. A thousand dollars a week, or maybe five, or ten, just for talking half an hour over the radio. Anybody could do that. Why do I never get such a break?"

Well, there's an answer to that. Everybody can talk. But not everybody can talk so well that millions of people will keep still and listen. One must have something to talk about. There must be a background.

The job of talking over the radio is the harvest that follows a great deal of plowing. To get a job like that—a "break" like that—you become a newspaper reporter and work year after year for less money than printers and brick masons get.

When you have learned your trade, you travel to other lands where news is being made and risk your skin to get it. You narrowly miss death when your ship is torpedoed; you advance and retreat with fighting men while bullets whine overhead; you have an eye shot out in the greatest of wars, and then you come home and punch a typewriter for ten more years while waiting for the "break."

That's all there is to it. Anybody could do that—if he had the time, and patience, and everything.

Then there's the case of Sinclair Lewis—another lucky stiff. Only 43 years old, and already winner of the Nobel prize. His books translated into ten languages, and at least one of them sold to half a million people. A market for all he can write, at any price he cares to name. And his novels are mere reporting—just minute descriptions of unlovely people, with a gossipy tendency to exaggerate faults and a frank way of revealing stored-up bitterness.

Anybody could do it.

You just go through college as a poor youth overlooked by the other students, and then you get a job and begin learning your trade. You get fired many times for incompetence, and live year after year without money enough to afford a clean shirt twice a week.

After fifteen or twenty years of obscurity and poverty, you borrow $500 to live on while writing a book that proves you have learned your trade, and then you wake up famous.

That's how easy it is. Just keep on eating crusts for half a lifetime, and there you are.

Fame and fortune come in a day. A lucky nobody comes out of obscurity and his name appears in flattering headlines.

Anybody can do it—just by working and living on short rations for twenty years while waiting for a "break."

PRO AND CON

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Pork Barrel Relief.

(New York World.)

It is difficult to find any merit in the opposition of certain members of Congress to the appropriation in a lump sum of $150,000,000 as an emergency construction fund to be expended under the direction of the President and a committee of his Cabinet on public works already authorized by law, so as to mitigate unemployment. The hostility of Congress to lump-sum appropriations is of long standing, and within reasonable limits it is desirable that the expenditure of public moneys should be directed in detail by the same body which imposes the taxes.

In this particular case, however, every expenditure which it is proposed to make has already been approved by Congress, and the discretion of the administrative officers is limited to the decision as to which items among those authorized will afford the most direct and immediate benefit to the unemployed. A committee of the Cabinet is clearly in a better position to choose wisely in this matter than some 500 members of Congress. The average congressman is not half so much interested in relieving Nation-wide unemployment as he is in obtaining as much of the appropriation as possible for his own district.

Exclusion of Aliens.

(Brooklyn Citizen.)

Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, has a practical method of dealing with the unemployment problem, but it will take time to put it into effect and also the assistance of his fellow congressmen. His proposition is to stop all immigration for a period of two years, or more, except immediate relatives of foreign born people now living here.

Not Too Much Cooperation.

(Milwaukee Journal.)

Jouett Shouse explains that Mr. Hoover will have to cooperate with the Democrats in Congress if he expects them to cooperate with him, so it looks as if there would be no overproduction of cooperation.

Must Have Pork.

(Boston Transcript.)

There is obvious force in the President's contention that his plan avoids the long delays incident to the selection of new projects by Congress. Even if Congress resisted the temptation to institute new enterprises and apportioned the money among undertakings already authorized, as the President intends to do, there might still be long delay. There would still be danger that this great relief would become the content of a new pork barrel with the customary squabbling over the division of the spoils. In the meantime, the unemployed might wait.

But Some Bills Don't Pass.

(Indianapolis News.)

Those appropriation figures that have been presented to Congress makes it look as if the Government dealt in money in carload lots.

Lame Ducks Stay Here.

Detroit News.

There is no excuse any more for the lame duck session. With transportation what it is, a congressman should be able to get his law books from home and open a Washington office easily in one month.

Spice of Life.

(Toledo Blade.)

Putting a Republican out of office to put a Democrat in doesn't solve the unemployment situation, but it introduces variety.

No Telling!

Indianapolis News.

All seemed to be serene at the opening of Congress; nevertheless guessing how Congress will act is as precarious as guessing what a jury will do.

Unselfish Patriots.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In voting two to one against the eighteenth amendment the members of the American Bar Association opposed something that has brought lots of business into the law offices of the country.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

President Willard, of Baltimore & Ohio, Disclaims Opposition to Development of Waterways.

To the Editor of The Post—Your attention has just been called to an editorial which appeared in a recent issue of The Washington Post under the caption, "Rail vs. Waterways," which the following words are used:

"The determination of the railroads to fight further extension of the inland waterway system was recently expressed by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio."

Reference is made, in confirmation of the above statement, to my remarks before the Board of Trade of Washington some two or three years ago. If you would be kind enough to read what I actually did say on that occasion you would find that I said nothing whatever that would justify the words which I have quoted from the editorial appearing in The Post, and a careful reading of that portion of my address which is quoted in the editorial would show that I restricted my comments entirely to the use of Government money for furnishing facilities to operate upon the inland waterways after such waterways had been improved. I made no criticism whatever concerning the policy of the Government to improve inland waterways, assuming, of course, that the work would be spent only in such cases where there was reason to believe that the expenditure would be economically justified. I think that the words which President Hoover used in the same connection, however, question very much the right or propriety of the Government using public money for the purpose of purchasing boats, barges and equipment to be operated by the Government upon such improved inland waterways in competition with the existing established agencies of transportation.

Since I spoke in Washington Secretary of War has discussed the same matter at St. Louis and elsewhere, and he has definitely stated that it is not the purpose of the Government to furnish and operate facilities beyond a certain experimental period, indicating that as a matter of general policy his views are in accord with those which I expressed before the Board of Trade.

I regret that I should have been made to appear in The Post's editorial as opposed to the proper development of inland waterways, because I have never at any time made a statement publicly or privately which would justify such a conclusion.

DANIEL WILLARD.

Denial of Promotions Puts a Premium on Slackers in Government Service.

To the Editor of The Post—The action of a majority of the House of Representatives in refusing all promotions within the grades of the Federal service for the next year and a half seems a beautiful illustration of placing a premium on slackerism and mediocre work. The employe is told, in effect, that it will avail you nothing, in a material way, whether you work hard, perform your duties in a painstaking manner, endeavor to improve upon your methods. Your colleague, who does none of these things, but who does just enough to get by and perhaps falls below a rating of 60 per cent, will fare equally well so far as material advancement are concerned, and at the end of the day be in better shape physically and perhaps less fatigued mentally."

Most congressmen, at some time or other, have themselves been employes. How would they like to be working under such a plan? They have no doubt, have sons and daughters working on a salary basis rather than wages. How would they like the application of such a rule to them? Would any far-seeing employer adopt such a rule, carrying, as it does, death to incentive to the employe's endeavor?

The thought arises, would it not be well to expand the activities of the Federal Bureau of Education to the establishment of a school of logic on Capitol Hill, and make it one of the requirements that the compulsory attendance of lawmakers be enforced.

Visitors' Mansion Needed in Park—No Accommodations for Public at Present.

To the Editor of The Post—In connection with Mrs. Russell's letter in regard to making Washington attractive in every respect to visitors, there is something which interests me very much. I refer to the lack of a visitor's mansion in the National Zoological Park.

In order to make the park a pleasant outing place its seems to me that such a mansion is absolutely necessary. A spacious bungalow with broad porches and adequate facilities for dinners, lunches and refreshments would be about right. In all seasons it would be appreciated. Especially in the winter time it would be a warm spot in which to rest when necessary for comfort after inspecting the bears and the buffalo, the deer in the big cages, and other outdoor attractions. The present restaurant stand in the center of the park is a shamefully inadequate shelter when the weather is hot or cold. The addition of animals now at the Zoo makes it clear that the addition of new animals, however rare, does not appeal to the public of as much importance just now as the erection of a visitors' mansion. I should think the Zoo budget could be made to furnish a considerable part of the fund necessary for the improvement. The Zoo is by no means the least among Washington attractions listed by visitors. They would find it much more comfortable, and its yearly aggregation of visitors would be increased by many thousands of Washingtonians if furnished a comfortable and attractive place of shelter in rainy and sloppy weather.

CHRISTMAS SEALS IN LIVELY DEMAND

Cash Receipts More Than $15,000; Banks and Stores Aiding Campaign.

SALES AHEAD OF 1929

The demand for the Christmas seals now being sold to help finance the community health services and protection from disease, which are carried on by the Washington Tuberculosis Association, continued strong the past week, Mrs. Joseph Sanders, chairman of the seal sale committee, at 1022 Eleventh street, said last night.

"We are as yet far from the goal of our seal sale campaign," Mrs. Sanders commented. "The total funds needed to continue our health program during 1931 having been conservatively estimated at $45,000, we are naturally gratified to find our cash receipts for seals up to now amounts to something over $15,000, the value of 1,500,000 seals at a cent each. The volume of seals for the first full week of the campaign is well ahead of the first week of last year's campaign.

"With only fifteen shopping days before Christmas, it is apparent our sale of Christmas seals must be advanced with all possible speed and by every available means. There are still many thousands of persons to whom a supply of the seals has been sent on approval, together with a stamped and addressed return envelope, but from whom we have not yet had response. We hope these persons will use all or some portion of the seals or more, if possible, for their Christmas parcels and letters, sending payment as soon as convenient and using the return envelope to assist us in keeping the record straight.

On Sale in Stores and Banks.

"Any portion of the seals that can not be bought should be returned in the same envelope, as we have to account for all of the seals placed on sale here by our contract with the National Tuberculosis Association.

"Beginning tomorrow, we hope to have placed in all the important chain stores throughout the city our self-service boxes, in each of which will be found envelopes containing ten seals each, the purchaser being expected to drop a dime in the slot for each envelope taken. The organizations helping our campaign thus are the People's drug stores, the Sanitary Grocery Co., the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., the American Stores, Liggett's drug stores, the Whelan drug stores, the United Cigar tores and individual firms.

Women Help Greatly.

"By Wednesday, with the help of women's organizations and volunteer women as individuals, we plan to have a series of seal sale booths in operation in all the larger department stores and a number of banks, which have promised to cooperate. For all this helpful work we are most grateful.

"The women's groups so far reported to our committee for this service are as follows: Junior League, which will open a booth at Woodward & Lothrop's tomorrow; the American Association of University Women, the Senior Council of Jewish Women, Junior Council of Jewish Women, Parent-Teacher Association, Friendship House, Hadassah Society, Tuberculosis Association, Twentieth Century Association, Starmont Aid, Social Service Committee of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, Women's City Club, Florence Crittenden Circle. More are to be organized."

Coxey Holds Food, Not Rum, Problem

Tells Forum Prohibition Row Is Used to Divert Idle's Attention.

"The 10,000,000 unemployed men and women of this country are not worrying about something to drink, but about getting something to eat," "Gen." Jacob S. Coxey, head of "Coxey's Army" of 1894, told the Washington Open Forum yesterday afternoon in a public lecture at 808 I street northwest.

"Prohibition is a smoke screen to distract attention away from empty stomachs," declared "Gen." Coxey, "just as Al Smith's religion was a similar smoke screen in 1928."

Several speakers disputed Coxey's contention that his noninterest bearing bond plan would bring relief.

President Linn A. E. Gale, of the forum, described his testimony before the Fish Investigating committee last Friday and declared that neither Coxey's plan nor any other could "save the doomed capitalist system."

Ruth Nichols breaks Women's Coast to Coast record using AMOCO products

Battling against the worst of weather conditions, fighting head winds for a large part of the trip Miss Ruth Nichols landed at the United Airport, Burbank, California on December 1st with a new woman's transcontinental record.

Her flying time from New York was 16 hours 59½ minutes--breaking the former record held by Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller by 8 hours 44½ minutes.

Miss Nichols pressed on through a series of storms which grounded most airplanes--to set this new record--a truly exceptional performance. Her Lockheed plane was fueled with Amoco-Gas (Aviation Grade) and lubricated with Amoco Aero Oil and Greases--another record added to the long list of notable performances aloft that stands to the credit of Amoco products.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Social Events Planned After Service Game

New York Hotels Will Be Scene of Army-Navy Gayety.

IN spite of the rather hurried decision to hold the Army-Navy football game on Saturday in New York the social features already decided upon give promise of exceptional brilliancy.

At the Commodore, which is the headquarters of the Navy players, gayety will be particularly in evidence, with the dinner dance of the Naval Academy Graduates Association filling the grand ballroom and supper dances in the main dining room and grill from 11 o'clock on Saturday evening after the game.

The graduates' dance will be a colorful event. American naval officers from all parts of the country and virtually the entire Midshipmen's Brigade, numbering 2,000, will attend. There will be a large representation from naval bases at Newport and New London, navy yards and departmental bureaus. A large number of retired officers of high rank are expected.

"Bill, the Goat," the Navy's mascot, has quarters assigned for him on the roof. He is a very important quadruped and will be tended carefully during his stay at the hotel.

Among those who have made reservations at the Commodore are Admiral S. S. Robison, superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Robison; Capt. C. P. Snyder, commandant of midshipmen, and Mrs. Snyder; Representative Clyde Kelly and Mrs. Kelly, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flaherty, of Washington; Capt. Wilnut R. Van Auken, of Washington; Commander Marc A. Mitscher, Bureau of Aeronautics.

Preparations are being made at the Astor Hotel for a dinner dance in the new ballroom there next Saturday, following the Army-Navy football game. Mr. William Norbert Nigey, in charge of arrangements, announces that the entire proceeds will be donated by the hotel to the mayor's committee on unemployment. More than a thousand will be present, including Army officers from nearby posts, West Point cadets, the Army eleven and persons prominent in social and civic life.

David Robert Simon to Wed Miss Esther Sherby.

Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, and Mrs. Simon last night announced the engagement of their son, David Robert Simon, to Miss Esther Sherby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sherby, 1433 Decatur street northwest.

Miss Sherby is a graduate of Goucher College, while Mr. Simon is a graduate of the University of Michigan and a member of the real estate firm of McKeever & Goss. The date for the wedding is to be announced.

Mrs. William V. Pratt, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Pratt, is in New York where she went to meet their son, Mr. William Pratt, jr., who has returned from Europe. They will come to Washington today.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter will entertain at luncheon tomorrow.

With William F. Baker as director, the dramatic committee of the Arts Club will present on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week the three-act comedy, "The Man With a Load of Mischief," by Ashley Dukes. This English play of the period of the Stuarts was given in New York not long ago with Miss Ruth Chatterton in the leading part, and is to be repeated there this winter, with Miss Jane Cowl as the Lady.

In the Washington performance, Miss Marjorie Lowe takes this part, with Mr. Harry Welker as the Nobleman. Others in the cast are Miss Elizabeth Baldwin, as the Innkeeper's Wife; Miss Virginia Barrett, as the Maid. Mr. Martin Scrange will take the part of the Innkeeper, and Mr. Charles Watts that of the Serving Man.

Mr. J. Milnor Dorey will be the host on Wednesday evening and Miss Anne Ives on Thursday evening.

One of the most prominent committees in Washington is that of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, appearing here at Constitution Hall on December 16, January 27 and March 10. The committee includes Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, chairman; Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, Mrs. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Charles Eaton, Mrs. John H. Gibbons, Miss Laura Harlan, Miss Elizabeth Butler Howry, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mrs. William D. Mitchell, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. James S. Parker, Mrs. Charles J. What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"SAGITTARUS."

IF December 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from to 11:30 p. m. The darkest hours will occur from 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m.

Conflicting influences and conflicting events are prognosticated for this date. The debits and credits will perfectly balance—the material losses and gains will be equal, and the opposition from one will be offset by the assistance of another. Valuable lessons in experience will be stored up for the future.

The child born on this December 8 will have a sturdy, unimaginative nature. It will go after facts, not fiction, and will become a thorough master of its work. It will have an intense loyalty and will fight for friend or principle.

You have a guileless and at times a gullible nature. With almost childlike simplicity you trust all humanity. With people you like, your lips are never guarded—that is your imprudent way. It is your charm and your danger. You are many times artfully tempted to make unfortunate disclosures to malicious ears. It is difficult for you to learn when to be on your guard. You like an emotional situation, and you like to be the pivot in a situation. You like to play with fire, and you will not go through life without being burned, and, unfortunately, others will be seared by the same fires.

You have a great deal of nervous energy and you are inclined to undertake more than you are qualified by nature to do—you abuse and overestimate your physical strength. You run, when it is only necessary, and advisable to walk. You get excited, when you should remain calm. In a time of real emergency, you become hysterical. You have, however, that force and determination which makes for self-preservation, if not success in life. If you want a thing, or want to do a thing, you will gain your end, by hook or crook. You will flirt with love long before you will discover the real thing.

Successful people born December 8:
1—Augustus Post, author.
2—August Belmont, banker.
3—James M. Brown, banker, president Society for Prevention Cruelty to Animals.
4—Henry Timrod, poet.
5—W. C. Durant, automobile manufacturer.
6—Albert Abrams, physician, founder of spondyltherapy.

Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will not receive on Wednesday of this week.

Miss Janet Richards at her weekly review of outstanding world events for the past week will first touch upon the high lights of the President's message with some comment on the reactions of the press, and congressional action relative thereto. The universal dread of increased taxation as reflected in the cabinet crisis in France and Germany, and the unrest in Italy and Great Britain and in the revolt against the Borah plan for a 2 per cent increase in the income tax, will also be reviewed, as will certain current books touching upon world problems. Time permitting "More About Spain" will conclude the lecture which is given in the Masonic Temple Thirteenth street and New York avenue, at 10:50 o'clock.

THE pleasant voice of Mrs. Hoover will be heard for the third time over a national network when she christens the S. S. President Hoover at Newport News, Va., tomorrow. (WRC, 11:40 a. m.).

Mrs. Hoover is the first mistress of the White House to use the radio. Her initial broadcast after entering the White House was to a girls' club from a tent at the Rapidan camp on a stormy night.

Miss Anne Morgan having started the series last week, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, sr., will contribute the second talk in what is probably the most exclusive list of women who have ever given commercial radio testimonials (WRC—Tuesday, 5 p. m.). A face cream concern is sponsoring the series.

Earle Sande, the jockey, who hopes to follow his racing success with a singing career, will give a special recital at 10 o'clock Wednesday night, those in charge of WOL's sixth anniversary celebration that night announce. It will be the first time Sande has appeared on the air under his own name.

THE NBC announces with considerable flourish that more than 200 concerts by America's three leading service bands, the Marine, Navy and Army, will be heard under its sponsorship during the forthcoming season. This is welcome news until one reads further along and learns that these concerts are all scheduled for daytime programs.

The assumption then is, apparently, that evening listeners are not interested in these offerings.

The answer is, however, that there are advertising accounts to be taken care of in the evening, though some of the commercial programs furnish music inferior to that offered by the service bands.

Columbia has made a commendable move in putting the Marine Band on Wednesday nights for a half-hour period once a week. Nevertheless, watch and see if this time of the band, which in The Washington Post survey proved the fourth most popular feature on the air, isn't taken away if an advertiser comes along and wants it.

COUNT JOHN M'CORMACK—title O. K., recently conferred upon him by the Pope—will sing from London today at 4:20 p. m. through Station WMAL instead of 4:40 o'clock, as originally announced.

When former Gov. Al Smith broadcast last week, it was from his new home in a pent-house on top of the large apartment just built at Fifth avenue and Twelfth street, in New York City.

We learn from our private scouting service that the governor's studio is especially wired for radio and the house, which is a two-story affair, is as large and comfortable as any modern home on the ground.

ANY ONE having a friend or relative in China was accorded the privilege Saturday by the RCA of sending a 25-word message free, by way of celebrating the establishment of direct communication between China and the United States. Today it would cost $25 to send the same message.

It recalled an amusing incident when the free privilege was offered to a group of naval officers here at the time the transatlantic radio-telephone service was inaugurated.

An American naval officer put in a call for a friend of his in the British navy in London. However, the British officer did not happen to be at home at the time, but, because of the novelty of a telephone call from such a long distance, the British authorities made every effort to find him, and finally located the officer 50 miles in the country.

There was tremendous excitement among the natives and the officer himself was pretty much flustered.

"Has anything of great importance happened?" were his first words over the telephone.

"No," the American officer in Washington replied calmly. "I just wanted to call up and ask how you were getting along."

"If that is all it is," the astounded Englishman replied, "I want to say that I am getting a deuce of a thrill out of it!"

Jane Interprets the Mode

Chic simplicity characterizes this street frock of brown and beige figured wool, with its snug brown patent leather belt. (Courtesy of Yteb, Paris).

Aboard S.S. Ile de France, Dec. 7.

WELL, it was the most gorlicious birthday party a lovely lady ever had, and I tell you, it was worth living 57 odd varieties of years just to have. Observe that I say "odd varieties" so you can't take that to actually mean that it was 57 years since I let out my first yelp, "Yeah, and been yel-luping ever since," says La Chic Secretaire, swatto voice. Oh well, and she did think it was ginger ale, at that, being a beau b ee-u-tiful lady from the West where men are men and they really give tea parties!

And between the roses and orchids from the-lovely-lady-with-a-voice-who-broadcasts, and the several dozen orchids from several half dozen dee-lightful editors, and the studio piano from Mrs. and Mr. Green Eyed Salesman, who is actually only the vice president of a big corporation with a name (and you'd recognize it, if I ever told), and the platinum anklet set with six perfect and tiny diamonds which I am having shortened to make a wristlet, not being extraordinarily attractive as to nether extremities (although agile), and the breathlessly exquisite little oval snuff box of Louis XV carved out of a single carnelian and mellowed by age into deathless beauty from our flavorite dee-lightful Editor, it was just about a perfect day.

Not to mention the several rare and beautiful books, the box of home-made candy from the little-lady-who-didn't-have-much-money-to-spend, but used her head and thought of something that after all, all the salary checks a week couldn't buy, and oh, other and lots of other lovely thoughts and things.

And I want to thank those of you who somehow, I can't imagine how, remembered this birthday of mine from last year, and sent me greetings. After all, it's such things that make the life of a columnist worth while.

* * * *

The double-breasted effect on suits, street dresses and sports coats is becoming quite an important thing these days, and nowhere does it show to better effect that on Yteb's swanky brown woolen dress that I have sketched for you today. The material is brown and beige checked woolen, and don't you adore the four big buttons and the brown patent leather belt? The slender skirt is amply full for walking, due to the clever inverted pleats.

* * * *

Every Christmas present you give is acceptable, of course, but haven't you given some that need some little touch to make them the warmly personal gifts that you have wanted them to be? And what better way to do this than to wrap them in an individual and charming manner? 'N' it isn't hard at all to be original, my deahs, if you send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet I have prepared for you this week, telling you how to make the most adorable wrappings for gifts!

"White swan who endlessly sails
The troubled darkness of my heart."

Only it was a white swan touched with the gentle fingers of the dawn into rosy rose quarts, and it sailed in all its graceful, calm loveliness on—the top of a black umbrella handle. And there it is in today's drawing!

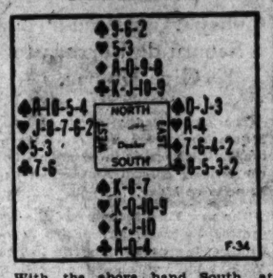
WORK ON BRIDGE

COUNTING THE CARDS OF PARTNER'S SUIT



With the above hand South, at Auction Bridge, would have bid one No Trump and obtained the contract. At Contract Bridge South, with a count of 19 and all suits stopped, would have bid two No Trumps, North three.

In opening the play, West delighted the Declarer by leading a small Heart which was won by East, with the Ace, South false-carding with the Ten. East returned his partner's Heart lead, South won, and Declarer had no difficulty in taking ten tricks, two Hearts, four Diamonds and four Clubs.

With his combined count of well over 30, he had every reason to expect to capture that number of tricks; but East missed a point in the play which, strange as it may seem against so strong a Declarer, would have saved game.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

When he won the first trick, East could be sure that his partner's Heart suit was not longer than five cards. The Six was the card led, the Five and Trey were in dummy, and East had the Four, so the only card lower than the one led which could have been in West's hand was the Deuce. South's false-card should not therefore have deceived East. He could tell that South had three more Hearts; and in view of the play of the Ten, they must be very high ones. There was but little chance to save game with such strong minors in dummy, but the one chance was to lead the Queen of Spades.

With that card led, East and West would have been able to take in four Spade tricks in addition to their one Heart, and the declaration would have been defeated.

GOOD NEWS, BRIDGERS.

We are pleased to announce we can now renew the offer of Milton C. Work's great Contract and Auction booklet entitled the "Playing Problems." Bridgers who received copies from previous offers are most enthusiastic over it.

"Playing Problems" presents eighteen hands, the complete auction and contract bidding for each hand with reasons for each bid, the answers to every question and the reason for each answer in complete detail.

"Playing Problems," which will be of much greater value to the auction and contract player than many high-priced textbooks, is not for sale. It has been prepared exclusively for readers of The Washington Post by special arrangement with Mr. Work. One copy will be mailed to you upon request if you send self-addressed stamped return envelope, together with six cents in stamps to defray part of the cost of printing and handling this 48-page booklet. Requests not complying with these conditions will be ignored. Address Milton C. Work, care Washington Post.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

NEW TEMPERATURE PLAN.

INSTEAD of accepting the reading of an ordinary thermometer at its face value and trying to hypnotize ourselves into feeling hot, or cold, or comfortable, as the thermometer suggests, we may soon be accepting "effective temperatures" as our guide-post. The phrase "effective temperatures" is to be the substitute for the older "comfort zone."

The effective temperature is the temperature as a normal, about average person, feels it. We speak of it as the temperature which warms or cools the human skin, which affects its comfort as comfort is registered by the nerve endings that register heat and cold. It is based on the temperature as measured by the ordinary thermometer, the moisture as measured by the hygrometer, and the rate and force of the movement of the air. It is the cooling or warming power of the air when these other qualities are also taken into consideration.

We have acquired instruments for measuring effective temperatures by stages. First, there was the ordinary thermometer. Then the hygrometer, of which the wet and dry bulb thermometer is one type. Then came the katathermometer, the short for which is kata. And now comes the domo frigometer, which Calvin Frazer pronounces a handier and a more sensitive instrument than the kata. If it proves to be such, in all probability some Yankee inventor will devise an instrument in which the principle will be made use of, but the device will be cheap and easily worked.

The theory of all of these instruments is that while atmospheric heat is important for comfort or discomfort, the factor of evaporation of water radically changes the effects of heat. If the air be very dry and the evaporation rate is very rapid, a high temperature may not cause heat stroke or even great bodily discomfort. There are many variations of his theme. Even if the temperature is light and the humidity is as it should be there may be discomfort because of drafts.

DANGER OF DYSENTERY.

S. M. G. writes: 1. What is amebic dysentery? What causes it and is it contagious?

2. Is there any danger in using milk and butter from a home where the one afflicted with such a disease does the milking?

3. Is this kind of dysentery curable?

REPLY.

1. Amebic dysentery is flux due to an animal parasite called Aemba coli. It is moderately contagious. It is spread by water and food.

2. Yes, unless the milk is pasteurized.

3. As a rule, it is.

MANY POSSIBLE CAUSES.

C. W. writes: What is the cause for one's heart to miss beats? Dou you think it is heart trouble? It has done this for two years. I seem well every other way.

REPLY.

Among the possibilities are nervousness, irritable heart, organic heart disease, goiter, excessive use of tobacco and excessive use of coffee. A physician should be able to say why your heart beat intermits, and whether you need do anything about it. In some instances the symptom is unimportant.

English Girl Gets $5,000 A Year for Tasting Tea

London, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—For tasting tea day in and day out, Margaret Irving is paid $5,000 a year.

Head taster for a large produce market section, Miss Irving's word is taken as final on judging values of millions of dollars' worth of tea imported by her firm each year.

"From the examination of the leaf," she says, "one can judge the freshness of tea, and as a rule say exactly where it was grown. But this is not sufficient. It has to be tasted as well."

Miss Irving turned to a long counter on which were arranged many tiny teapots and cups.

"Of each sample of tea, a quantity equal to the weight of a dime is measured out and dropped into one of these pots. Then boiling water is added.

"The tea is left to brew for six minutes. When the six minutes are up this little clock strikes. It was made especially for the purpose.

"Then comes the tasting. I do not swallow the tea—I examine the scalded tea leaves. A bright copper color is a sign of a good tea."

FRANCES M'DONALD

DEAR Frances McDonald: Mind if I give you my sob story? Have been married one year and everything was great until about three months ago, when my husband decided to get frisky and kissed a girl friend of mine and then when I accused him he denied it, later saying he knew how mad I was and did not want to make me worse.

About a month later the same thing almost happened, only I happened along and this time he was "just trying to see what the girl would do." Both times he had been drinking some.

He insists he loves me and does not ever intend to do anything like that, but sometimes I get sort of afraid, and get cold feet thinking of it. If never seems to be entirely out of my mind and I have become jealous and suspicious of everything he does. If he comes home from work a little late, I am angry. If he looks at any girl in the street car I get jealous.

What am I going to do? I certainly don't want to ruin our happiness getting that way, as I don't like nagging and jealousy any more than he does. Should I forget about it, blame it on the liquor, and try to trust him again, or what?

The strange part of it is that he has never looked at a girl until these times. Do all men slip sometimes like that? It seems so hard to believe, he is so good to me all of the time.

Hope you can help me.

A BRIDE.

Well, I guess the liquor will have to take the blame. Certainly the incident is not worth your peace of mind. However, let your husband understand that you hold yourself free to do anything that he may feel excusable for him. People who intend to remain married should preserve the semblance of personal dignity that insures marriage against needless wear and tear.

The man who expects his wife to continue to respect him after she has found him surreptitiously engaged in cheapening himself and her is asking something beyond any woman's power to give. It is respect that makes a wife trust her husband. It is loss of respect that makes her believe him capable of anything. He calls your attitude "getting mad," which reveals his intelligence as inferior to yours. He thinks you are "jealous." He does not know that you will really never think very highly of him again as long as he lives. Where once you rather looked to him as the one capable to decide things, you now know that you are the better balanced one. In other words, he has forfeited his place in your esteem. It would surprise him to be told that if he continues his behavior in a very short time you would cease to even care. Wives who astonish their friends by condoning misbehavior in the men they have married are not just angels of patience. They are simply women who have stopped respecting and, therefore, loving their husbands. And they truly do not care what they do.

Let your husband know that you know all this. Let him know that it is not jealousy, but disgust, that you are feeling. He is inviting trouble and he ought to be told about it. Then dismiss the matter from your mind.

Jean's Santa Claus

By JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Jean Melba, a small town girl from Kelsey, Conn., who sometimes thinks she is in love with Phillip Baldwin, an ardent suitor who promises to appear Christmas morning with a marriage license. Losing her Kelsey stenographic job, Jean looks for work in New York, planning to live with Mollie Wilder, a more sophisticated friend. To her dismay, Jean learns that Mollie has married and left town. The situation is saved by Sandy Clause, a handsome but cynical young man who protects her from a master's advances, and since he has lost her, traveling bar in the shuffle, arranges for Jean to spend that night at the apartment of Marcia White, whose quasi-hospitality does not blind Jean to the fact that her abode is no haven of safety. Sandy leaves but Jean's fears are indorsed by the appearance of two sinister men, Slim Diggers, and Fargeson, alias Sampson. Jean flees the apartment and observes Sandy repairing. The next day he gets her a job with the L. F. P. and learns that Fargeson was murdered the night before in Marcia's apartment. Sandy tells Jean he did not return, although she knows she saw him and he later tells her he did come back—but not to Marcia's apartment. The L. F. P. is the Institute of Practical Philanthropy which Sandy manages; it aims to fulfill the wish of an eccentric but benevolent millionaire to encourage motherhood ideals among little girls by giving them Christmas dolls, to be known as miniature babies. Jean maps out a campaign to give every poor little girl in New York a miniature baby, and also learns Mollie, whose marriage has ended disastrously. The two girls live together. In the meantime Lionel Gilman, Sandy's assistant, takes advantage of the latter's absence in Boston to make love to Jean. Phil Baldwin arrives in town to look over the situation and when Lionel and he start fighting Jean realizes she can never care for either of them. Sandy returns from Boston and accidentally meets Jean on Fifth avenue where she is staring covetously at an ermine wrap in a show window. Jean discovers little Ellen, daughter of Fargeson, and coming home one night finds Mollie mysteriously disturbed. Soon after, while taking Sandy on a visit to little Ellen, Jean learns that Marcia is the child's mother.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIX.

Sandy's exclamation upon seeing little Ellen reminded Jean of something Lionel had said the day they selected the model miniature baby.

"Why * * *" said Sandy, taking the child in his arms, "she's a pocket edition of you, Jean!"

Ellen smiled happily and studied the design in his tie. Miss Wood, standing a little to one side, beamed upon them proudly.

"Isn't that funny?" Jean laughed. "The first time I saw Ellen, I said to myself: 'She's the living miniature baby.' You'll understand what I mean when you see the dolls. And the day Lionel and I selected the miniature baby, he said it was an exact replica of me."

"Yellow-haired, blue-eyed miniature babies!" said Sandy. "There are possibilities for a popular song in that. Think I'll try my hand at it." And to Ellen: "What do you want Santa Claus to bring you Christmas?"

"A minatoo baby," Ellen said promptly. "And he's going to bring me one, too. He wrote me a letter and told me so."

"Gee, that's great!" Sandy declared. "But what else do you want him to bring you? A carriage for your miniature baby, and a little bed, and * * *"

Ellen shook her little head firmly. "Miss Wood says I mustn't want anything else, cause there are lots of poor little girls who might not have anything. * * * What do you want Santa Claus to bring you?"

Sandy blinked. "Hmm! Would you believe me if I told you?"

Ellen nodded eagerly.

"I want a minatoo baby, too * * *"

Ellen laughed deliciously. "Great big grown men don't have minatoo babies," she declared stoutly.

"Just the same I want one," Sandy insisted soberly. "I want a big yellow-haired, blue-eyed minatoo baby just like you're going to get, Ellen. * * * Do you suppose Santa will bring me one?"

Ellen put a small finger to her cheek and gazed off thoughtfully. Then: "Why don't you write him and ask him to? He might. * * *"

Sandy stood up and looked at Jean. "What do you think, Jean? Would Santa bring me one if I wrote him?"

But Jean had heard little of their conversation. She was thinking of Marcia White, and wondering what Sandy would say if she told him that Marcia was Ellen's mother.

Nor, when they had left Ellen with a promise to take her on a tour of the toy department very soon, could Jean put Marcia from her mind. As Ellen's mother, Marcia was, reasonably, Fargeson's widow, and had been his wife when she had gone to Sandy with her story of needing funds with which to continue her study of art.

The truth came to Jean at last. It had been a deliberate conspiracy, Fargeson and Marcia had, in the popular jargon, "framed" Sandy, presumably for purposes of blackmail. Jean marvelled that she had not seen through it before. And Sandy * * * why hadn't he guessed it? Why * * * but she had to tell him, of course. She could not let him go on thinking Marcia was an innocent young art student.

But when she turned to him in the taxi and would have told him, she saw at once how impossible it was. Sandy was in love with Marcia. Anything that Jean might say tending to show that Marcia was not all that he believed her to be, he would most certainly misunderstand. And after all, if he should question her statement, she did not know that she could prove that which was perfectly obvious to her.

One thing, however, she did speak to him about. "Did you ever know a little, dried-up weasel known as Slim Diggers, Sandy?"

At first the name seemed wholly strange to him, but after a moment he said: "Yes, I have. I'd almost forgotten him. He came to Marcia's apartment one night with Fargeson." And then, in surprise: "But where did you hear of him?"

"I met him," she told him simply. "He came to Marcia's apartment with Fargeson the night * * * I was there."

"The night of the murder? But good heavens! Why didn't you tell me this sooner?"

"I thought it best not to," she replied quietly. "I shouldn't have told you Fargeson was there if he hadn't been killed."

A silence.

"Oh * * * I see." And turning to her again: "But my dear Jean, you didn't think for a moment that Marcia was * * * was deceiving me?"

"I didn't think anything. It was none of my business * * * However, let's not quarrel about it. I simply thought I would ask you about Diggers. He only stayed a few minutes. We heard him open and close the door when he went out. He couldn't have had anything to do with the murder."

"You heard him," Sandy said slowly, "but did you see him go out? How do you know that he didn't open and shut the door from the inside and then hide somewhere in the apartment until you had gone?"

Jean shuddered. She didn't know, of course; but the thought that Slim Diggers might have been hiding in the apartment when she had gone back to her room alone was upsetting. "I don't know anything, Sandy. If you think Diggers' presence that night important, why * * * you have my permission to tell the police."

"Of course, it's important. And I've no choice but to tell the police. And when they've found Diggers, they'll be very near a solution of the murder, I'm thinking."

Lionel was entertaining a visitor when they returned to the office, a very large, ruddy-faced man, with a twinkle in his blue eyes that somehow reminded her of Sandy. He rose as she entered, and a moment later was reaching behind her to take Sandy's outstretched hand.

"Welcome, welcome!" Sandy cried cordially. "We're late, but it couldn't be helped. Have you been waiting long?"

The big man shook his gray head, smiling. "You've interrupted a delightful session. Lionel has been telling me about the babies."

Jean had started to her desk, but Sandy called to her and she came back, a little uneasy.

"Dad," said Sandy, "you are now face to face with the young woman who, singled-handed, is making your idea one of the biggest things the L. F. P. has ever done." And, with a mischievous smile: "Jean, gaze upon the daddy of the Miniature Baby Plan * * * my father * * *"

Jean could only stare dumbly. So the daddy of the plan was Sandy's father. * * * And the little boy who had grown up and left that enormous and amazing house in Boston was * * * Sandy.

She knew that she had, mechanically, given her hand to the elder Clause and that he was speaking praise of her work. But it was a full minute before she had regained possession of her faculties and was able to listen intelligently.

"Sandy has told me everything you have done," the elder man was saying, "and I'm naturally delighted. But I hadn't expected to find such a * * * child. You're almost young enough for a miniature baby yourself."

"I'm well preserved," Jean laughed. "Actually, I'm old, years older than when I came to New York a few weeks ago. * * * Are you really pleased with what I've done?"

He gave her hand an assuring squeeze. "More than pleased. You're doing what Sandy told me a few days before you came to New York probably could not be done."

"Oh, say!" Sandy protested. "That's hardly fair, giving me away to my face. Give me credit for finding some one who could do it, Dad."

These two were congenial companions, not simply father and son. Jean listened to their good-humored banter, thrilled by the perfect understanding between them.

Presently the elder Clause said: "Sandy's mother and I are returning to Boston this afternoon, Miss Melba, but we both hope to see you again before Christmas. You're handling the miniature baby plan magnificently, and we want to see you properly rewarded."

Jean said quickly: "But I have been rewarded. My salary is out of all proportion with what I do. And besides, if it weren't I'd be fully repaid in knowing that I'd been able to help you give happiness to the thousands of little girls who will be gloriously happy Christmas morning because of what you are doing * * * Oh, no * * *" with a positive little shake of her yellow head. * * * "I wouldn't have any other reward. * * *"

Sandy walked to the elevator with his father. The moment they were out the door, Lionel caught Jean's arm and jerked his head toward Sandy's office. The door was closed, but Jean could see nothing unusual.

"I've had the devil's own time," Lionel told her in an undertone. "Mr. Clause was determined to go into Sandy's office, and I had to do some fast thinking to keep him out."

Jean stared at him curiously. "But why shouldn't he go in Sandy's office?"

He put a finger to his lips. "Not so loud. She asked for you first, and then for Sandy. I didn't want her hanging around out here so I told her to wait in there."

"Will you tell me what you are talking about, Lionel?" Jean demanded impatiently. "Who is it in Sandy's office?"

At that moment Sandy returned, smiling amisably. Lionel pointed and whispered: "Marcia's in your office, Sandy. Wanted to see you and Jean * * * and she's loaded for trouble."

Jean went directly to her desk, but presently Sandy came out of his office and called her. "Marcia wants to talk to both of us," he told her, softly. "I don't like the look in her eye, but don't let her frighten you."

Marcia did not return Jean's casual nod. She sat by Sandy's desk and tapped a neat foot ominously. Jean dropped into a chair a few feet away. Sandy half-leaned, half-sat on his desk.

"All right, Marcia," he said quietly, "You wanted to speak to us together, you said. What is it?"

It was like setting off a charge of powder. Marcia needed nothing more than an invitation.

She said, coldly: "I've come to tell your young friend that I've stood all the abuse from the police that I intend to. She murdered Mr. Fargeson and she'll have to accept the consequences. * * *"

Jean stared at her blankly, wondering if the woman were mad.

"I mean it!" Marcia snapped. "You were the only other person in the apartment that night, and you'll have a hard time explaining to the police why you ran away, leaving the outside door open."

Sandy, plaintly amazed, said: "But Marcia, * * * why in the name of all that's holy, should Jean want to kill Fargeson? She didn't even know him."

Marcia laughed bitterly. "Didn't she? Then, * * *" quietly, "why did she call Fargeson by his first name the minute he walked into the apartment * * *?

"Why * * *?" Sandy was stunned. "I didn't know that she did * * * until now * * *"

Suddenly Jean was out of her chair, her eyes blazing upon Sandy: "Do you believe that outrageous lie?"

Sandy looked from Marcia to Jean. I * * * I don't know what to believe. * * * Jean. If * * *"

"Never mind," Jean shot at him. "You've committed yourself. You don't know what to believe. You mean you don't know whether to believe me or this * * * this miserable woman who has been living a lie since the day she walked into this office and told you she was studying art and wanted to borrow money! * * * She didn't want to borrow money; she wanted to steal it, and the only reason she hasn't blackmailed you before was because you paid too well without it * * *"

Marcia, her face purple with rage, leaped to her feet, but Sandy was suddenly between them.

"Jean," he said coldly, "you're mad. Marcia could sue you for libel ten times over for what you've said in here. Now don't say any more."

Jean turned on him fiercely. "And you still believe her? * * * You poor * * *fool!" She fairly spat the words at him. "Listen to me * * * that woman is Fargeson's widow * * * widow of Sampson the bootleg king and gangster * * * little Ellen's mother. And I can prove it in any court in the country * * *!"

Abruptly Jean turned on her heel and ran out of the office, slamming the door behind her.

Dazed, Sandy turned to Marcia. "Marcia * * * is that true * * *?"

But Marcia's voice came from between her clinched teeth like a hiss * * * "That little devil * * *! I'll have her taken for a ride before the day's over * * *!"

YOUR NAME WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

The family name "MacClellan" (also spelled "MacClelland" and "MacLellan") is of Celtic origin, and means "the son of the servant of Faolan." "Faolan" was an old personal name meaning "the wolf." Various forms of "MacClellan" are now especially common in Scotland and in Ulster.

The family name "Jessup" (also spelled "Jessop" and "Jessopp") is recorded in the oldest English documents. It is merely a variation of the personal name "Joseph." "Joseph" is ultimately of Hebrew origin, and may be translated either "he shall add" or "addition." The change from "Joseph" to "Jessup" is explained by the influence of the Italian personal name "Giuseppe" (English "Joseph") which was brought to England in early days especially by the Lombardic merchants and Italian Jews. A certain Adam Josep is mentioned in an English document of the year 1300, and a Johannes Jesop is mentioned in a list of names published in 1379.

The family name "De Brueller" (also spelled "De Bruller" and "De Bruler") is a Low German form the full significance of which is "he who lives near the marsh or swamp." In the English definite article "the," such names the "De" corresponds to and has nothing to do with the preposition "de" of Latin origin which means "of" or "from."

The family name "Underhill" is one of the relatively few names whose original meanings are indicated by their present forms. It is obviously of English origin, and means "he who lives below the hill." It appears to be first recorded in the Hundred Rolls, a famous thirteenth century list of English names.

GINGERBREAD (Two Thin Loaves).

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

One cup of milk.
Three and one-eighth cups of sifted soft wheat flour.
One-third cup of fat.
One egg.
One-half teaspoon soda.
Four teaspoons baking powder.
One-half cup sugar.
One cup molasses.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon ginger.
One-half teaspoon cloves.
One-half teaspoon cinnamon.

Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Stir the liquid into the dry ingredients. For a shallow loaf the oven should be moderate; if muffin pans are used the oven should be fairly hot.

In this recipe sour milk may be used instead of sweet in the same quantity. In that case the soda should be increased to a scant teaspoon, and the baking powder decreased to two teaspoons.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood.—A slender 18-year-old girl, who has spent most of her movie life (of three years) "on location," is back from the longest jaunt she ever made, one of 40,000 miles to Java, Sumatra, China, Japan and other points of interest in the Far East.

DOROTHY JANIS

To Dorothy Janis the movies have meant travel, which she always desired, and plenty of it. Her first picture took her to the Arizona desert for several weeks. Another was made in Wyoming and later trips have given her a pretty good knowledge of the topography of the rest of the Western States.

Two years ago she spent two months in Tahiti, where Ramon Novarro filmed "The Pagan." That, until the last trip, was the most interesting. Only one picture in which Dorothy has had a part, "Lummox," was filmed entirely in a studio.

The young traveler minimizes the dangers of working in an insect-infested jungle, such as she has been doing for the last few months. Her role is that of a native girl and required her to wear a skimpy costume.

Likes Jungle.

Jumping spiders, mosquitoes that hum like airplanes and lizard-like little animals called chee-chas annoyed Dorothy most.

Much of the picture, called "The White Captive," was taken in the tiny village of Sumatra and the company lived in native houses minus the comforts, and often the food, of civilization.

Yet in spite of the hardships of such a trip, Dorothy prefers jungle picture making to the comparative security of Hollywood.

Tamed Apes.

Dorothy's company was interested in the ourang and was to have gone to Borneo, but sanitary and living conditions there are so bad that the island was avoided. The jungle is dense and the ourangs are noted for their unfriendliness.

So ourangs in captivity in Java were used instead of those running wild in Borneo.

The ourang, or orang-utan, is a large manlike ape having arms that reach to its ankles. The high point of the story is the supposed killing of Dorothy by a band of these apes.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

GROWING PLANTS ALWAYS HEALTHY.

THE secret of keeping plants in a state of health can be explained in three words, keep them growing.

This is not an especially hard thing to do. Plants, like human beings, are responsive. They grow well for those who love them well enough to give them the best of intelligent care, which means you must learn to interpret your plants' wants.

Each plant has certain definite peculiarities and certain definite requirements as to temperature, water, soil, drainage, light and ventilation. These must be met if we would get out of a plant all there is in it, develop all its possibilities, and have a specimen of which we can really be proud.

A plant which is sending forth new growth is rarely attacked by insects. But the moment it ceases to grow trouble begins. The ends of the leaves turn brown and fall off. Every owner of a palm or fern has had this experience. When the plant's vitality is at low ebb some insect puts in an appearance and aids materially in the final destruction of the life of the plant.

It is not so hard to keep up a constant development of new growth. You must, however, be systematic in your care. Watering today and forgetting tomorrow will never lead to anything but failure.

Remember, too, that plants in a warm room where the atmosphere is dry require a great deal of water. Therefore, we must wet them thoroughly every other day. When I say thoroughly, I mean literally soak every particle of earth about their roots.

Then you must keep the pores of the plant open. A plant breathes through its pores and when these become clogged with dust, the plant at once begins to show signs of disease. There is only one sure way to keep the pores open and that is to sprinkle the foliage three times thereby aiding the plant's beauty, for dusty foliage is always unsightly.

Like Butterflies

The cyclamen blossoms emerge from their tight little cocoon buds, and hover on curved stems over the plant.

If you've never watched the exquisitely soft petals of mauve or white or delicate peach unfold day by day, you have an experience in store for you.

You will find directions on soil and care in a leaflet prepared especially for readers of this column, and which you may have simply by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope for mailing to

JANE LESLIE KIFT,
Care of Washington Post.

Then as a preventive treatment, it is well to take a table fork and turn over the soil in the pot about twice a week, being careful not to disturb the lower layer of loam. This will go a long way toward keeping your indoor garden in a state of perfect health.

When plants begin to show signs of disease, remove them to a cool place, away from other plants. Sometimes when a plant ceases to send forth new shoots it is a sign that it needs more root room. It must then be transplanted to a larger pot.

(Copyright, 1930.)

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed stamped envelope is supplied.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Christmas Spirit.

The spirit of Christmas can not be evoked merely by extravagant shopping.

If Christmas morning is to bring anything but a feverish opening of tissue-wrapped packages and a counting of new possessions, parents must have prepared for the occasion with something more than gifts.

In those homes in which the celebration of Christmas is still colored with religious feeling, the use of ritual, the attendance at church services, the manner in which the Christmas story is told, bring to the child readily the feeling of reverence, of sharing in an experience of spiritual beauty.

But even in homes where the strictly religious significance of Christ is not felt, the child may still know something of creative joy and beauty in its celebration.

All children appreciate the joys of Christmas Day far more intensely if they have contributed to their preparation. They should be encouraged to give gifts made with their own hands, or at least to save their allowances to buy gifts for those who are close to them.

With older children the old-fashioned idea of giving to those who have little produces a glow of spiritual pleasure.

"Filling stockings for the poor" is a good way of letting children express those feelings of good will, generosity and compassion.

The Christmas spirit is cultivated, too, by permitting the children to take an active part in preparing the pleasures which all will share at home—helping to bake the Christmas cakes and make ices, shelling nuts, gathering green boughs to decorate the house—all these help to add a special quality to the delights of Christmas.

It is expected the tests will be under way early in the new year.

ELKS OF ALEXANDRIA OBSERVE MEMORIAL

Lodge Pays Tribute to 155 Who Have Died Since Its Installation.

CARLIN GIVES ADDRESS

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone: Alexandria 523.

Former Representative Charles C. Carlin, who delivered the memorial address at the annual services of Alexandria Lodge No. 758, B. P. O. E., last night in the Elks lodgeroom, paid eloquent tribute to the worthy departed brothers, of whom there were 115 since the installation of the lodge in 1902. He was reminded, he said, by the long list of those who had been his friends and associates, and who had passed on, of the uncertainty of our span of life, and of the fact that many of those present might be added to the list before the close of another year. When one has lived his life, and ambition is gone, he can still look into the future and realize that the sweetness of dying lies in the fact that one can die in the affection of those with whom he lived.

Mr. Carlin also paid high tribute to the mothers of America. When he was abroad during the World War, he said, he was struck by the evident superiority of the American soldiers to those of other nations, and spoke of this to a senator in the party. The reply he received was that this is not due "to the males of this country, but to the mothers," and that American mothers, the finest on earth, produce the greatest race of men on earth.

The names of the 115 departed brothers were shown on a board to the left of the stage and as the secretary called the roll of the departed a light opposite the name was flashed.

Following the opening ceremonies by the officers of the lodge, the Rev. L. J. Koster offered the invocation; Nathan Clark rendered a solo, "There Is No Death;" the roll of the departed brothers was called; a musical reading, "The Great Guest Comes," was given by Mrs. V. Wade Ryder; a violin duet, "The End of a Perfect Day," was rendered by Prof. L. B. Ryder and Paul Miller; the address was delivered by Mr. Carlin; Prof. Ryder played a violin solo; the closing hymn, "Auld Lang Syne," was sung by the audience, and the benediction was pronounced by the chaplin, the Rev. Edgar Carpenter.

The memorial committee was composed of P. A. Kersey, chairman; Harry H. Hinken, Robert South Barrett, Judge Howard W. Smith, J. Owen Lynch, Herman Friedlander, C. C. Carlin, John W. Tulloch, Michael T. Dwyer and Judge William P. Woolls.

Prof. Charles G. Maphis, of the University of Virginia, and chairman of the State committee on illiteracy, has appointed a subcommittee to serve in the City of Alexandria in obtaining the names of illiterates and making arrangements to have such persons tought to read and write, and after receiving instructions from the State body will proceed with the work.

The local committee is R. C. Bowton, superintendent of public schools; Mrs. M. B. Apperson, president of the general Parent-Teachers Association; Miss Mary Lindsey, of the Red Cross chapter; Lawrence E. Roland, manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and a member of the Rotary Club; Robert G. Carter, president of the Kiwanis Club; John Barton Phillips, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Urban S. Lambert, president of the school board; Mrs. E. E. Carver, vice president of the State Parent-Teachers Association, and Mrs. John Owen Lynch, an active member of the local association.

The public relations committee of the Chamber of Commerce will report the full membership of that body, at a meeting to be held tonight at the George Mason Hotel, on the proposed increase in water rates for the city, applied for by the Alexandria Water Co., and the matter now awaiting a hearing before the State Corporation Commission.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will hold an all-day meeting today, with the morning session, at 11 o'clock, featuring the protrayal of the "Story of the Nativity." The meeting will adjourn at 12:30 for a box luncheon, and when the meeting is resumed the principal business will be the installation of officers and a harvest day program. Circle leaders will submit reports at this, the last meeting in the year. All during the day a special committee will have charge of the sale of articles suitable for Christmas presents.

The December meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club will be held at 7 o'clock tomodrow night, at the George Mason Hotel, with a program appropriate to the Christmas season presented by the program chairman, Miss Corinne T. Reardon. All club members will bring presents, or preferably cash, to be turned over to a special committee to use as they see fit for a family or families in need of help at this time. This committee is composed of Miss Mary Monroe, school nurse; Miss Marguerite Davis, public health nurse; Miss Bertha Bristow, Red Cross nurse, and her assistant, Mrs. H. Noel Garner.

John W. Holdbrook, a retired railroad car inspector, died Saturday night at his home, 915 North Columbus street, and the funeral will be held at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The Young People's Service League of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church held a candle light installation service last night at 8 o'clock, when a part of the music was by the male members of the choir only.

State Department Asserts Highways in All Parts in Good Condition.

STATUS OF MAIN LINES

Richmond, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Practically all the oiling on State highways has been finished for the year, the weekly report on road conditions issued today by the State department of highways said.

Road conditions in general were good in all sections of the State. There was a little more oiling to be done on short sections, but the sections were in fair condition without the treatment, and were to be oiled when the weather was more favorable.

The only construction on U. S. Route 1, from Washington to Fredericksburg, Richmond, Petersburg and the North Carolina line toward Raleigh was a short section of patching work about halfway between Washington and Fredericksburg, and about a mile of widening at the Richmond city limits.

Widening construction was going on near Strasburg, north of New Market, and south of Harrisonburg, on U. S. Route 11, through the Shenandoah Valley, but no detours were necessary and traffic was having no trouble in going over the work. Richmond and Amelia that was soft and slippery a week or more ago has been oiled and was in good condition.

Work on Richmond Road.

Work will be under way during the coming week on a mile of road near Mineral on Route 39, between Richmond and Charlottesville. This section was expected to be a little dusty or slippery, depending upon the weather, but traffic was to have no trouble in getting over it. Between Charlottesville and Staunton, reconstruction was started near the city limits of Staunton, and traffic was advised to drive slowly, keep on the pavement, and watch for workmen and equipment.

United States route 17, the Tidewater Trail, was hard surfaced from Fredericksburg to Tappahannock, Saluda and Gloucester Point, except about a mile just south of Tappahannock, where traffic was using the old soil road around bridge construction.

The only construction on United States route 60, which crosses the State from Virginia Beach to the West Virginia line near White Sulphur Springs, is a short section of widening near Lynchburg, and a little construction near Natural Bridge. United States route 211 from Washington, D. C., through Warrenton, Sperryville and Luray to New Market was all paved and in good condition.

The Richmond-Danville highway was in good condition all the way. A new bridge was under construction at Staunton River, and several miles of road, and another bridge at Halifax were being reppired, but traffic was using the old road at both places and was causing but little inconvenience.

Leesburg Highway Oiled.

Route 41, the Broad street road, from Richmond west toward Charlottesville, was under construction and rough between the Richmond city limits and Short Pump, and traffic was advised to use Patterson avenue and the Three Chopt road.

Between Washington and Leesburg, on route 54, oiling was expected to be started Monday, and continued through the week. This road was in good condition, and traffic was having no trouble going over the oiling work. Between Leesburg and Winchester, which is all paved road except about 2 miles, the highway was in good condition.

Oiling during the last week was completed on route 514 between Yorktown and Hampton and on route 611 between Oak Grove and Colonial Beach.

LEAF-MART FEELS PREHOLIDAY RUSH

BRIGHT SALES ARE BRISK

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Dec. 7.—The Petersburg tobacco market will close two weeks from tomorrow for the Christmas holidays. The market will reopen about January 6, when shipments of dark tobacco are expected to appear much more frequently, while activity in the bright leaf market will increase considerably. So far the dark market has been more or less quiet. There have been but few offerings of this type of leaf, and what has been brought in has been of inferior grade.

On the other hand, the bright market has been very good. Last week about 400,000 pounds were handled at an average price of $11 and $12 per hundred pounds. Many of the lots brought high prices and marked improvement in grade was noted. This improvement has been steady and is expected to increase. Warehousemen are looking forward to an exceptionally busy two weeks between now and the time that markets close for the holidays. It is believed likely that sales for the period will aggregate close to 1,000,000 pounds. Prices also are expected to maintain a high level.

Petersburg markets this year are receiving more tobacco than at any season past.

Much of this is coming from North Carolina and other points usually favoring other markets. In some instances the leaf has been hauled more than 150 miles to be sold on the local market. Higher price averages here have been largely responsible for this influx of tobacco.

So far sales this season are 400,000 pounds ahead of last season. This is looked upon as an excellent indication that the year will be a record one for local tobacco growers, and warehouse proprietors believe that it is a forerunner of improved conditions in the Petersburg tobacco belt.

APACHES DEFEAT MOHAWKS, 12-6, TO RETAIN TITLE

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The baseball magnates of the National League, in their meetnig this week, will give consideration to the home run with a view to abating the profusion of the same and enhancing its charm for the customers. This indicates that the batting averages, which the patrons peruse with such serene faith that the official figures can not lie or even exaggerate, are subject to arbitrary manipulation by the business departments, with the turnstile figurse as the basis of regulation.

If the home runs be few, the averages modest and the turnstiles sluggish, as was the case about the beginning of the last decade, stimulate the baseball, restrict the pitchers and thus emphasize the batting. Then if, after a number of years, the customers again show symptoms of boredom or complaint that the home runs are a menace to life and limb, call another conference and revise the hitting downward.

Of course, this state of affairs has long been suspected, and I am not sure but that I have seen some skeptical reference to the character of the official baseball published in the papers from time to time. But when Mr. John Heydler, the president of the National League, admits that the proprietors will give attention to the composition of the baseball in their wish to minimize the home run, his high office suggests for the first time that the magnates have been deceiving the patrons in their long insistence that the baseball was the same old ball that Cactus Cravath hit for the heroic total of a dozen home runs before the war. There is no reason for indignation about this because baseball, poetically called the national game, actually belongs to the baseball magnates holding the greatest number of stockholders' proxies.

Magnates Run Own Business Well.

They do a very good job of running their business, their entertainment is an excellent dollar's worth and, considering the confusion of the football rules and the arbitrary character of some of them under the regulation of a semipublic commission, it seems much better that interested business men should continue to govern baseball.

The regulation of the home run might be interpreted as a small imposition on the customers' illusions, as the home run long has represented triumph in the popular imagination, but it has not been as presumptuous as the coaches' rule in football, declaring the fumbled ball dead at the point of recovery. In this case, the self-interest or class-interest of the professional coach was consulted and obligingly served, so that thenceforth until the next revision no coach would be in danger of being discredited by a touchdown scored against him from fumbles. And while it is true that the magnates served their own business interests when they stimulated the hitting, it must be said that they improved the spectacular value of the game, thus giving a little bit more for the dollar, whereas the fumble rule operated the other way.

One odd fact in all such manipulations of the rules of these sports is that the players currently engaged in the games never are consulted. In baseball, the infielders and pitchers and some of the managers, notably John McGGraw, have squawked about the frisky and sometimes homicidal character of the ball, but it is not to be supposed that the impending reconsideration will be directed by any consideration for their ideas. On the contrary, the turnstile statistics will be taken as the basis for deliberatoin and, in the sense that the turnstile readings reflect the customers' pleasure, the revision may be regarded as a response to public opinion.

Fans Suspect, But Enjoy Cloutng.

Thus in baseball, although the patrons do seem to have been the victims of a deception, their plight was no unhappy one, for they much enjoyed the hitting, suspecting, perhaps, but never really admitting to themselves that three out of four home runs were factory made.

An envious manufacturer of baseballs once called my attention to the fact that the magnates had allowed themselves great discretion in the matter of the home run by adopting stipulations for size and weight alone. The ball must be of a certain weight and a certain circumference, but it may be stuffed with old rags, moss or seaweed or wound entirely of rubber thread like a golf ball, according to the magnates' wishes, which, in

Rout of Penn Heartens Middies

Army Served Warning by Improved Navy Eleven.

Team Escaped Serious Injury; Kirn to Be Ready Sat.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 7.—Jubilant over the clear cut victory which Navy registered over the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin Field Saturday, local gridiron fans today began to turn their attention to the game with the West-point cadets to be played as a charity benefit in the Yankee Stadium, New York, Saturday, with the outlook by no means dismal to what it was a couple of weeks ago.

There is ample reason for the encouraging feeling that now prevails in the Navy camp. Certain it is that the Middies machine clicked against Penn in a manner not hitherto attained.

Middies Appear to Have Hit Stride.

Close adherents feel that the Middies have really found themselves, and the head coach Bill Ingram and his staff of assistants have accomplished wonders in the last two weeks, and the showing in Saturday's game is taken in the light of serving notice on the Army boys that they have a whale of a battle on their hands, in spite of their more impressive showing throughout the season. The situation with Navy right now is strikingly like that of the 1929 campaign, when, after an otherwise mediocre season, the middies treked to Philadelphia to defeat the strong Dartmouth eleven by a score of 14 to 0 in a game that climaxed the Eastern campaign and was one of the years greatest upsets.

The tars came out of the Penn game in generally good physical condition, Capt. Henry D. Cooke, athletic director, said tonight. Bull et Lou Kirn, ace of the backfield, suffered a bad laceration of the nose early in the game, but will be in fine fettle for the go against the doughboys.

Otherwise bruises to several of the players, constitute the crop of the days hurts.

Scrimmage Is Due Tomorrow.

Bill Ingram has planned a light program for his charges in their final prepping for the pointers. Tuesday has been set a part for the final scrimmage and that will not be a heavy session. Otherwise practice will be devoted to signals and formation drills and further polishing up plays designed especially to unleash against the Cadets. The squad, 44 strong, will leave for New York on Thursday.

IN the tadpole stage the Paradox frog attains the length of 10 inches, and of this no less than 7 inches is taken up by the tail. As the tadpole gradually turns into a frog the tail slowly shrinks so that by the time the creature is an adult, or fully formed frog, it has lost its tail altogether and the total length of the animal does not commonly exceed 2 inches.

A man has to be good to be All-Southern quarter back for one year and exceptionally good to hold that honor for three years, but to do that and weigh only 116 pounds is bordering on the impossible. However, that is just what Reynolds Tichenor, of Auburn and Georgia University did.

Centuries old it still is perfectly strong and secure.

Irish Headed East With Grid Title

Unbeaten Notre Dame Eleven Brings National Trophy.

Trojans and Writers Praise Exhibition of Ramblers.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Football's supreme laurels—permanent possession of trophy signifying national intercollegiate champions three times in a decade—crowned the brows of Knute Rockne's Irish warriors as they headed homeward late today.

Ownership of the Rissman trophy, bestowed for winning three national titles under the Dickinson rating system, was one of Notre Dame's chief spoils of her 27-to-0 rout of Southern California yesterday.

Knute Rockne herded his Ramblers toward their home fields. The unconquered Notre Dame warriors of 1930 will arrive in Chicago Wednesday morning en route to South Bend.

Trojans Are Still Wondering.

The vanquished, still wondering at the amazing team which overwhelmed their best but comparatively puny efforts, remained to do naught but cheer their conquerors. The Trojans, subdued by their worst defeat since Coach Howard Jones took them in hand five years ago, heaped honors where honors were due. For themselves they sought forgetfulness by turning all eyes upon a banquet in their honor next Tuesday night.

Sports writers credited the Irish victory to their masterful and perfectly timed work in every department offensive or defensive, which swamped and stunned the men of Troy.

The Irish, under the direction of their cool-headed quarter back, Frank Carideo, overpowered the Trojans from the beginning, and shortly after the fray began, Marchmont Schwartz, brilliant half back, flipped a pass to Carideo, who ran 8 yards unmolested to the first score.

Before the first quarter ended Paul (Bucky) O'Connor, the South Pasadena (Calif.), boy who had played half back until he was shifted to the full back berth three days before the game, ran 80 yards through the entire Trojan team for the second score.

O'Conner Scores Again.

Subbing at his new position for Larry (Moon) Mullins, of Alhambra, Calif., who was injured the week before in the Notre Dame-Army game, O'Connor scored again the third frame on a lateral pass, Lukats subbing for Schwartz, scored the other touchdown.

The vaunted Trojan offense was smothered at the line of scrimmage. The interference was broken up by sifting Notre Dame linemen and the ball carriers fell easy prey to the raiders' charging secondary.

Passes contributed to the defeat. The Trojans' slips five times fell into the arms of Irish players, and only four times into the arms of S. C. receivers. The successful passes gained scarcely 10 yards apiece. The Irish made their heaves good when they needed them, and only one was intercepted.

One feature of the game, Capt. Marshall Duffield's quickly thought out play near the end of the first quarter, left the crowd gasping. The Trojan quarter back, after leading an advance into Notre Dame territory, was forced to dash back to midfield to recover a bad pass from center. Tacklers were closing in on the quarter back when he reached the ball, scooping it up at a gallop. He whirled and, scarcely pausing, punted over the Notre Dame goal line to pull his team out of a bad hole.

90,000 Cheer Rival Stars.

Duffiel dand Carideo, as they left the field in the second half, having played their last game for their schools, brought the 90,000 spectators up cheering madly for minutes.

Mullins got his wish to play in the game before his home town people. Coach Rockne sent him in for one play after the second half kick-off.

Bertie Metzger, midget Notre Dame guard, played his heavier Trojan opponents literally off their feet.

Chisox Almost Sign Mulleavy 3 Years Ago

Gregory Mulleavy, White Sox new shortstop, was almost a member of the Sox three years ago. The Chicago team was playing in Detroit when Mulleavy, then only a kid, asked Ray Schalk, then manager, for a trial. Ray gave him the once over and liked him so well, he took him along to Chicago, but later decided he was too inexperienced and did not sign him to a contract.

Two-years later, the New York Giants picked him up and placed him with San Antonio. The Texas club released him and Casey Stengel, of Toledo, was importuned to give him a trial. Casey was not sorry, for his sale to Chicago followed.

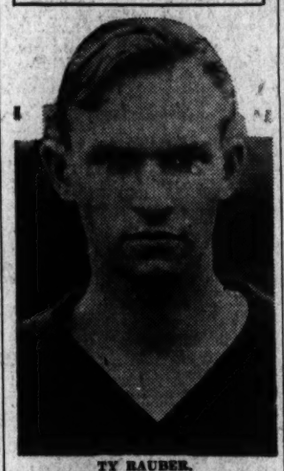
7,000 WATCH RAUBER LEAD LITTLE INDIANS IN SANDLOT TRIUMPH

HERO OF GAME



TY RAUBER.

Pass to Dugan Brings Apaches Touchdown Near Start.

Hawks, Outplayed for Half, Come Back to Make Score.

By WALTER HAIGHT.

THE Apaches, inspired by two former college stars—Ty Rauber, from Washington and Lee, in the back field, and Coach Jerry Carroll, from Georgetown, in the line—beat their opponents to the punch to pile up a two-touchdown lead, successfully withstood the shocks of a fighting, driving Mohawk Team attempting to salvage the game and emerged with their District championship intact by virtue of a 12-6 victory before 7,000 fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday afternoon.

While the Apache and Mohawk players to a man gave their best in the battle, the game was dominated by Rauber, just as Capt. Frank Goettge, yesterday's referee, used to dominate the play of the old Quantico Marines. It was Rauber, fighting, bucking, twisting through the line to wiggle himself clear for a 45-yard gain just after the kick-off who put the ball in Mohawk territory. It was Rauber who made up those precious yards with a first down at stake. It was Rauber who tossed the pass to little Eddie Dugan for the first touchdown. It was Rauber who crashed over for the second score.

Rauber's Punting Fails Him Once.

It was Rabuer whose punting failed him at one stage but who came back with important long kicks in the last quarter. It was Rauber who intercepted a Mohawk pass to end a drive that seemed headed for a touchdown. It was Rauber who sent his body hurling to all parts of the line in a brilliant defensive exhibition.

The Apaches surprised their most ardent supporters by starting three players in the backfield with Rauber who have played but little part in previous triumphs. They were Eddie Dugan, Jim Birthright and Marvin Meyers. While this quartet was in action, the Apaches made both scores and held the Mohawks without a first down.

After being completely routed in the first half, the Mohawks came back to the field to outplay the Apaches for the remainder of the game. "Snail" DeLabre was the pile-driver who led the march into Apache territory. One of Rauber's poor punts paved the way for the Mohawk touchdown. Pee Colliere caught the ball at full speed near the south side-line and was pulled down only 3 yards from the goal. DeLabre on three plunges made the necessary distance.

Colliere's Valiant Efforts Futile.

Colliere, playing one of the best games of his career, made a valiant effort to lead the Hawks out of the rut. He had some success with his passing, particularly to Boots Brown, but Rauber's interception ended the most promising scoring chance.

The Apache line from end to end put up a fine exhibition, the defensive play of Carroll and "Bits" Clifford standing out. Wondrack, Delaney and O'Brien were prominent in the Mohawk forward wall.

The slow footing cut down the efficiency of Joe Sweeney, who, with DeLabre, was transferred to the Mohawks

22,000 See Brooklyn Bow to Giants' Pros

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Reversing a previous decision, the New York Giants defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 13 to 0, before a crowd of 22,000 at Ebbets Field today and retained their hold on second place in the National Football League.

Benny Friedman and Chris Cagle, Giant stars, played only a few minutes in the second period, but their combined efforts brought a New York touchdown. Friedman carried the ball over on an end run and kicked the extra point. The Giants scored again in the last period after a long drive down the field. Moran made the touchdown.

Battalino and Chocolate In Week's Feature

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Christopher "Bat" Battalino, of Hartford, Conn., who never has fought in the "Big Town," although he holds the world's featherweight championship, comes to New York this week to risk his title against Eligio Sardinas, of Cuba, Negro boxer who has won fame as Kid Chocolate.

The Title Scrap, main attraction of the annual Christmas fund card at Madison Square Garden Friday night, is the headline event on a national program that is somewhat better than it has been for the past few weeks. Battalino has not met much stiff opposition since he took the featherweight crown from Andre Routis and his performances have been hampered considerably by bad hands, but fans are rapidly finding points in his favor.

The Chicago Stadium offers a rival attraction Friday night in a ten-round heavyweight battle between Young Stribling, one of the outstanding contenders for the heavyweight championship, and Gerald Ambrose "Tuffy" Griffiths, of Sioux City, Iowa, a young battler who has been in and out of the limelight several times.

COLGATE HAS GOOD YEAR IN EAST

Victory Over N. Y. U. Gives Maroons 9 Triumphs.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Although Colgate managed to keep its record against Eastern rivals untarnished in New York's big benefit game, New York University shared the honors of the day by holding Len Macaluso, the Nation's leading scorer, in check and giving the powerful Maroon eleven only a 7-to-6 victory. The young Violet team played on even terms through most of the game after a fumble and a 30-yard pass, Hart to Orsi, had given Colgate a touchdown in the first period.

In the final frame it staged the one big advance of the battle, marching 78 yards for a score two minutes before the end. Johnny Orsi, star Colgate end, broke through to block the kick that would have brought a tie.

Only about 20,000 fans turned out for this benefit game. Rain in Pittsburgh held the attendance down to 5,000 as Carnegie Tech romped to a 26-to-0 victory over Washington and Jefferson in another charity affair. Harry McCurdy, Carnegie quarter back, was the spark plug of the Tartan attack, scoring one touchdown and passing for two more.

Davis and Elkins Halts New River's Streak.

Another 10,000 fans paid their share for charity as the Marines defeated the Coast Guard, 7 to 0, in the annual game for the President's Cup, while a few more thousand watched two lesser charity affairs. Davis and Elkins defeated New River in one, handing the little West Virginia college its first defeat of the season, while Dickinson turned in its first victory, beating the Carlisle Army Medical School, 39 to 0.

Western Maryland completed its second season without a defeat, and remained alone at the head of the Eastern ranking list as the only unbeaten team as it downed Maryland, 7 to 0, in the battle for the State championship. Outplayed all through the first half, the Terrors opened a real drive in the final period and went 65 yards to send their star full back, Koppe, across with the touchdown.

Although Western Maryland was the only team in the East to get through the season without a beating, Colgate's final victory gave the Maroon a gold claim on the mythical sectional championship with Army and Fordham as its leading rivals.

French Steeplechase Won by 3-to-1 Shot

Auteuil, France, Dec. 7.—(A.P.).—Les-champlevois, a 4-year-old by La Farina out of Verroterie, owned by Gustave Beauvois, won the Maubourget Stakes Steeplechase Handicap today. Poisson d'Avril was second and Bigorneau was third.

The race, over the 2¼-mile course, was worth $4,000. Ten horses started, but two fell and one refused. The winner, ridden by Rioifo, finished two lengths ahead of Poisson d'Avril and paid 3 to 1 in the pari mutuel betting.

UMP A SPELL-BINDER.

George Moriarty, American League umpire, is getting to be quite an orator aside from the speeches he delivers to players on the diamond in the summer. He made a talk before high school students at Port Wayne, Ind., the other day, contrasting the game of life with that of a baseball contest and his philosophy drawn in terms of the diamond made a deep impression on his hearers.

DIEGEL WINS GOLF PLAY ON COAST

Beats Al Espinosa, 6 and 4, in Match Play Final.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Leo Diegel, Auga Caliente professional, won the first annual San Francisco open match play golf championship on the Lakeside links of the Olympic Club today by defeating Al Espinosa, Chicago, 6 and 4.

A string of birdies overwhelmed the Chicago professional. Diegel was two up on Espinosa at the end of the first eighteen holes, and at the turn of the second eighteen, held a lead of six. He ended the match by winning the thirty-second hole.

After the first hole was halved Diegel took the second with a par four. He held this lead until the seventh when Espinosa scored a birdie three to even the match. Espinosa won the thirteenth to take the lead.

Diegel came back on the fourteenth with a par four to Espinosa's five to even things up. Diegel took things in hand on the seventeenth which he won with a birdie four and went two up by winning the eighteenth with a birdie three.

He won the first hole of the afternoon round with a par five, the fifth with a birdie three, the seventh with another birdie three and the eighth with a par three to go six up. Espinosa made a brief stand by birdieing the twelfth to win this hole, but after the thirteenth was halved. Diegel took the fourteenth with a five to Espinosa's six to win the match.

Big Leaguers Gathering In New York for Meeting

By HERBERT W. BARKER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The major leagues' "fallen arch brigade" poured into New York today to begin its annual attempt to sell a baseball player and get a baseball team in return. Gathered here for the winter meetings of the National and American Leagues, club owners and managers stood around the lobby of the Hotel Commodore and engaged in endless conversations designed to discover a second baseman who can hit, an outfielder who can field or a pitcher who can put the ball where he wants it.

Some of the boys, such an Dan Howley, of the Cincinnati Reds; Rogers Hornsby, of the Chicago Cubs, and Donie Bush, of the Chicago White Sox, were one up on the others. They just spent a week attending the minor league convention at Montreal, where the lobby-standing record was seriously threatened a score of times. With this week of preparation behind them, they felt they were in better shape both to talk and to stand than those who passed up the Montreal meetings.

There were few signs of any definite trading attempts today. Hornsby seemed to sound the keynote when he said the Cubs were prepared to stand pat on their present line-up, but that they, like any one else, would be interested should good talent be offered for a reasonable consideration, whether in cash or players. "The Rajah" is not worrying about one position on his infield. He intends to play second base himself.

Swelling the crowd were a number of minor league club owners and managers who spent a fruitless week in Montreal trying to dispose of some of their star playing talent. If the majors and the nondraft leagues manage to come to an agreement on the draft question, some of these sales undoubtedly will go through. Until then, however, the majors have

GRIFFITH TO SEEK OUTFIELDER, PITCHER AT PARLEY

Yankee Pilot In Trading Mood

McCarthy May Listen to Deal Involving Muddy Ruel.

Nats' Owner Would Welcome Understudy for Bluege.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WITH Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr., accompanying him with the checkbook, President Clark Griffith, of the Washington Club, leaves this afternoon for the annual major league meetings to be held in New York, the American and National holding separate sessions tomorrow and Wednesday and convening jointly on Thursday.

While these gatherings are of interest to all of the club owners, what really draws the big leaguers, the minors and the players, especially the old-timers, is the fact that many deals usually are negotiated and all want to be on hand to participate in the dickering on the sidelines.

Just what, if anything, the Nationals will get in the way of playing talent remains to be seen. As is his usual quaint custom, President Griffith declares that he is perfectly satisfied with the material he has and that he simply could not bear to part with any of the hirelings now on his pay roll. At the same time, he also remarks that no sane person would turn down the offer of a ton of coal for a scuttle of ashes and that there is no telling what players he would give up if he were to receive a proposition smacking of this nature.

Pitcher, Outfielder Chief Needs.

Despite the fact that the Washington pitching staff as a whole figured best in the American League, according to the official averages, and that Outfielder Dave Harris was No. 1 among the league's pinch-hitters in addition to performing well when used regularly, the Nat owner admits that he would like to grab another seasoned moundsman—as would every other club in the league—and a hard-hitting right-handed hitting fly chaser, not to mention the fact that he believes he could use an experienced infielder as understudy to Ossie Bluege.

Griffith is hopeful that he may fill one or two of his needs via the purchase route, but he no doubt will find that he is mistaken in this respect for, despite the present hard times, baseball magnates seem to be insulted when offered money for "ivory," invariably demanding other "ivory."

This means that, if the Nats are to do any business, it probably will be in a trade. Joe McCarthy, new Yankee manager, has let it be known that he will listen to any reasonable offer. However, he has no surplus infield or pitching talent. He has gone on record that he needs a catcher, however, and he has several more outfielders than he can use, indicating that the Nats' best trading bet would be the veteran Muddy Ruel for a flyhawk.

Ruel Is Likeliest Trade Figure.

Washington could spare Ruel, although Griffith, of course, says he wouldn't think of such a thing. Roy Spencer proved himself second only to Mickey Cochrane, of the Mackmen, last season and crowded Ruel out of the first-string berth, while, in addition, the Nats still have Ed Kenna, who starred with Chattanooga last year; "Pinky" Hargrave, obtained from the Tigers via the waiver route, and Cliff Bolton, a great hitter but poor receiver, from which to pick their staff.

The Nats may not swing any deals at this meeting, but, if they do, it is the writer's guess that the veteran catcher will be one of the players sure to be involved.

turn, will gnerally correspond to the customers' relative appreciation of hitting and pitching. His firm was manufacturing balls for a number of minor leagues and the specifications were governed by no rule if the inches and ounces conformed to the code. Consequently, some leagues, wishing to develop long hitters for profitable sale to the major leagues, were using a ball which jumped 6 feet if merely threatened, and the customers on the pine planks of many a weed-grown ball yard in the bushes were babbling joyously about home runs which would have been infield popups if the ball had been the same that Ty Cobb opposed at the height of his career.

Moreover, this sensitive ball was practically autopsy-proof, for the rubber threads were interwound with the wool so that when a major league scout, hesitating to recommend some new Babe Ruth, should cut the ball in half the rubber threads would snap back into the vitals of the respective halves and disappear.

I used to think the customers needed a resentful voice to denounce the magnates for tinkering with the character of the baseball and denying that they had done so. It seemed a betrayal of public faith and so, no doubt, it was, but after a few yelps of indignation which were not any too genuine I subsided because I enjoyed the home runs myself, even knowing they were largely synthetic.

Now, if the baseball is subdued and the pitchers are released from some of their restrictions, perhaps a fine sense of historical accuracy would rewrite Babe Ruth's acheivements, reducing his home runs in proportion to the admitted stimulation of the ball he hit. Perhaps even some one ought to sue him for the refund of a like proportion of his earnings. But more likely the customers will just decide that he gave them a good time and let it all go. Such retroactive adjustments, carried out consistently, would ruin nations.

MARLBORO, ROSEDALE, KICKERS, FASHION SHOP WIN

Battles First In Soccer Series

Silver Spring Beaten, 1-0; Gaithersburg Bows, 4-2.

Army Swamped, 7-0; Gaelic-American Loses, 5-1.

By RICHARD TENNYSON.

DESPITE the overcast skies and the wet grounds, banner crowds turned out for the four Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association cup-tie matches yesterday. D. C. Kickers gained the feature victory of the day by defeating Silver Spring in a brilliant game, 1 to 0. Fashion Shop scored an unexpectedly easy victory over Gaithersburg, 4 to 2, Marlboro swamped Army, 7 to 0, and Rosedale walked away with Gaelic-Americans, 5 to 1.

All of the defeated teams were eliminated from the tourney and the victors, with Rockville, Newport News and Washington-Concords, who have not played yet will be drawn for the second round unless the association officials agree Tuesday night to let Newport News and Rockville play in the first round next Sunday.

Undoubtedly the D. C. Kicker-Silver Spring contest was the feature of the day. The Maryland lads played the brand of kicking game that their followers have been expecting all year, but the same old jinx pursued them as the Germans won on more or less of a fluke. In the last 25 minutes of play one of the Silver Spring lads fouled in his penalty area and Kuhner, taking the resulting penalty kick, drove the sphere through De Vries, Silver Spring goalie, with his usual accuracy.

Smith Stars for Silver Spring.

Billie Smith was the outstanding Silver Spring performer. This veteran raced from one end of the field to the other for the most part of the game, dribbling, passing and heading in faultless manner, but despite his clever playing he could not penetrate the German goal. Kuehner played brilliantly throughout.

Rosedale went about its job of eliminating Gaelic-Americans in a businesslike manner from the opening whistle. Barely 20 minutes of the game had elapsed when the Northeast lads had penetrated the Irish goal twice. The Wilson brothers, Sam Hook and Henry Irving, played best for the winners.

Fashion Shop played one of its best games of the year to defeat Gaithersburg. At half time the Ninth street lads were leading 2 to 0 by virtue of some clever passing and shooting of Smith, who, incidentally, will be lost to the clothiers until the first of the year, as he will be out of town. Watson, at goal for the victors, played his usual fast game.

Marlboro in Easy Victory.

Marlboro toyed with Army, which played the game with a makeshift team. At times the Maryland lads contented themselves with passing the leather in front of the soldiers' goal rather than shooting for a score.

Details for completing the first round of the cup tourney and drawing for the second will be discussed morrow night when the Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association meets in room 2, District Building. The Washington Soccer League will meet tomorrow also, and the Capital City League will not gather until next Monday night.

W. Va. Hunters Bag One Deer, Wound Another

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Dec. 7.—One more deer—the second reported—was killed, and one five-pronged deer injured but not captured as a result of the week's open deer season in Morgan County. James and Hunter Harden bagged a 132-pound buck in an orchard near here, where it was seen eating apples and at first mistaken for a cow.

Troopers McClung and Gatrill and Deputy Game Warden W. W. Burch met a five-pronged specimen coming head-on toward them while they were patrolling Sidling Hill in an automobile. McClung fired and dropped the deer, but it arose and fled, and was not recaptured even by a posse that spent a day trying to find it.

Brice Helsley and Robert Johnson jumped a black bear, which they estimated to weigh between 400 and 500 pounds, while hunting deer on the west side of Sidling Hill. Their guns were primed only for lighter game, and they did not attack it. It is the first time in ten years that a bear has been seen in Sidling Hill.

HAGERSTOWN Y. M. C. A. WINS

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 7.—The Hagerstown Y. M. C. A. basket ball quint, for the second time this season, defeated the Martinsburg Perfections, this time on the Martinsburg High School floor. The score was 44 to 22 and S. Segal and Shaw led the Marylanders to victory.

Brentwood Eleven Hands Centennials First Defeat

Leaders of Capital City 150-Pound Section Bow, 7 to 0; Northern Preps Defeat Wolverines by the Same Score.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

ACCOMPLISHING what no other team has been able to do this season, the Brentwood Hawks handed the champion Centennials a 7-to-0 lacing yesterday afternoon on the Silver Spring gridiron in the final contest of the year for the 150-pound section of The Post's 1930 Capital City Football League. The defeat was the first experienced by the Cents in the two years of their organization.

Previous to this battle the Northern Preps rallied to beat a fighting Wolverine eleven by the same score on the same field. The remaining teams in the division concluded their schedules last Sunday.

Hawks Adept Playing Aerial Game.

In registering their win the Hawks were forced to steal some of the offensive thunder for which the Centennials are noted—adeptness at throwing and receiving forward passes—for it was a short aerial heave which enabled W. Fellner, of the Brentwoods, to dash 56 yards unmolested for the only touchdown of the fray midway in the second quarter. Except for this brief bit of action, the contest was very evenly played throughout.

Fellner's long run for a touchdown caught the Cents entirely by surprise. With the ball on the Hawks' 36-yard mark and the Centennial secondary playing close in to the line of scrimmage, Williams suddenly dropped suddenly back and shot the pigskin about 8 yards to W. Fellner, who snagged it on the dead run, weaved away from the Cent safety man and dashed down the field for a score. Fellner also drop-kicked the extra point.

Up until the time the Brentwoods put across their 6-pointer, play had been confined mostly to midfield. Once possessed of the lead, however, the Marylanders played to retain this margin the rest of the doute, staving off several would-be Centennial touchdown sorties which carired to the very shadow of the Hawks' goal.

Centennials Threaten in Final Half.

Particularly in the last half were the Brentwoods hard put to prevent the Cents from scoring. Twice in the third period the section champions rushed the ball within the Hawks' 20-yard line, each time to be held fod downs. One of these threats resulted from a 43-yard pass—Bussink to Raffo—which placed the pigskin on Brentwood's 19-yard strip.

With four minutes of playing time left, the Centennials pounded their way to the Marylanders' 6-yard mark, only to have their opponents stiffen and regain possession of the ball on downs. The Hawks, themselves, also threatened to put across a touchdown on two other occasions, being stopped within 15 yadds of the Cent goal line once i nthe second quarter and again in the third.

Fumbles at critical times proved particularly costly to the Centennials. Their running attack, practically stopped dead by a powerful Hawk defense, the Centennials resorted to the air, completing seven passes for an aggregate of 87 yards. Besides the heave which paved the way for their touchdown, the Hawks also made some sizable gains through this medium. The Centennials made eight first downs to half that number compiled by the Brentwoods.

The all-around play of Fellner, Wilson and Holt, for the Hawks, and Finnegan, Raffo and Bussink for the Centennials stood out in the clash.

Wolverines Are Beaten Near Finish.

After three quarters of scoreless endeavor which found both teams being stopped twice when on the verge of touchdowns in the preliminary game, the Northerns, on the first play of the fourth period, shook Houston free for 42 yards around end and placed the ball in position for the Preps to score the 6-pointer which eventually meant victory.

Houston's run came with dramatic suddeness. Hardly had the teams lined up to start the last period, when the Redbird center quickly snapped the ball back to Houston, who had just relieved Sorrell as quarter back, and the Prep flash was off like a streak around end behind excellent interference. Sixteen yards from the Wolverine goal, however, he was brought down from behind. Marshall, Kessler and Reed then rushed the ball across for a touchdown, with the latter making the score. Marshall drop-kicked the goal.

The Wolverines threatened to knot the count several minutes later when Thompson recovered a Prep fumble on the Northerns' 19-yard strip. Bell Minor and Gerdom then rushed the pigskin to the 8-yard mark, where the Redbirds smeared the threat by taking the ball on downs.

Nine first downs were registered by the Preps during the battle to 4 hung up by the Wolves. The line play of A. Marks and White, and the ball carrying of Marshall and Reed stood out for the Northerns. Phillips, Thompson, Smith, Winters and Bell looked best for the Wolverines.

Soccer Title Award Possibility for Penn

Philadelphia, Dec. 7.—Pennsylvania's most successful soccer season since 1923 may lead to a championship when the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association meets in New York on January 10. The association replaced the old league and meets annually to award the title to a member team having the best record for the season. Last year Pennsylvania was a claimant for the title, which was awarded to Penn State.

This year Coach Douglas Stewart's eleven has a great record, with seven victories and one defeat. Swarthmore, Haverford, Lafayette, Cornell, Western Maryland, Yale and Princeton were defeated. Only four goals were scored by the losing teams, as opposed to 48 by Pennsylvania.

Harvard was the only team to defeat Pennsylvania, the score being 6 to 1. On the other hand, Yale defeated Harvard, 1 to 0, while Pennsylvania defeated Yale, 6 to 2. If a league were in existence, the three universities would be tied for first place. As it is, the association, composed of thirteen members, will vote to decide the titleholder.

Syracuse Veterans Return for Court Play

Special to The Washington Post.

Syracuse, Dec. 7.—When the Syracuse University Basket Ball Team opens it season with Dartmouth, at Hanover, on December 13, the five regulars who comprised last year's championship quintet will be in the line-up.

Coach Lew Andreas' "Four Midgets" and the lanky Slim Elliot at center formed an almost unbeatable combination last year. They lost but one Eastern game, to Columbia, by the narrowest margin at New York City toward the end of a long season. They also lost a game to Creighton, leaders of the Missouri Valley Conference, and avenged the defeat the following evening. This series was played at Omaha.

The present group includes four seniors and a junior. Elliot is the junior. Capt. Ken Beagle and former Capt. Lou Hayman are the forwards, while Ev Katz and Dan Fogarty guard the back court. Katz is by nature a forward, but because of his speed and the presence of the talented captain and former captain does his scoring from a guard position.

W. & L. FIVE IN DEBUT DEC. 18

Hopes Bright Despite Loss of Two From Champion Team.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, VA., Dec. 7.—Washington and Lee's Generals turn their interest from football to basket ball this week as the squad of 25 men under Head Coach Ray Ellerman start daily drills in preparation for the opening game of the season here, December 18, with the Shawnee Club, of Lynchburg.

The Generals' schedule to date includes sixteen games, six of which are with State teams. Virginia and V. P. I. are met twice, while William and Mary and the Shawnee Club are booked for a single contest.

The prospects this year under the reins of Coach Ray Ellerman, former Wisconsin court captain, and assistant to Dr. W. E. Meanwell at that institution, point to a favorable season. Of the five that won the State title last year, two are missing, Capt. Erine Wood, of Lynchburg, and Frank "Red" Hanna, dynamic guard, St. Joseph, Mo. Wood was lost by graduation, while Hanna was unable to return to school this semester.

Chief among the aspirants for team places this year are Leigh Williams, Norfolk, Va., All-State, and a nominee for All-Southern and All-American honors at center; Harris Cox, heavy scoring forward, Osceola, Mo.; Sam Barasch, forward, Rockville Center, N. Y.; Harry Burke, guard, West Haven, Conn., and Gene Martin, forward, Baltimore, Md., all of whom are monogram men.

Replacement of Two Guards Problem.

Coach Ellerman's chief obstacle to a successful season will lie in developing a pair of scoring guards, the equal of Ernie Wood and "Red" Hanna. Harry Burke is the only monogram man out for a guard place, with Marvin Pilley, Ferrum, Va., and Everett Cross, Washington, D. C., of last year's reserves. Paul Holbrook, Ashland, Ky.; Jack Jarrett, Dunbar, W. Va., and Luther P. Violett, Paris, Ky., are promising basketeers, who have come up from last year's freshman team.

Robert Annin, Toledo, Ohio; Jack Hardwick, Winchester, Ky.; Karl Smith, Waynesboro, Pa., are 1929 reserves who are fighting for team places.

Last year the Generals lost three pre-Conference games, and were rated as pretourney favorites. At the S. I. C. tourney at Atlanta, the Generals defeated Ole Miss in the opening round, and dropped an unexpected game to Tennessee in the second round. The tentative schedule:

December 18—Shawnee Club of Lynchburg, here.
January 9—St. John's, here.
January 10—Marryland, here.
January 17—Georgetown, there.
January 19—Marryland, there.

FRAT ELEVEN WINS OVER DEL RAY

Alpha Delta Omega Eleven Triumphs by 12-6 Score.

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Dec. 7.—Irish Kelly and Russell Sutton ripped their way through the Del Ray Athletic Club forward wall for touchdowns that gave the Alpha Delta Omega Fraternity a 12-to-6 victory over the Redbirds in a battle for the sandlot unlimited championship of Alexandria this afternoon at Baggett's Park.

Kelly smashed his way 5 yards to the Del Ray goal line in the third quarter, while Sutton duplicated the feat in the closing chapter for the points that gave the Greek society victory and the title. Both forward pass attempts to add the extra point were failures.

Pass and 40-Yard Dash Nets Del Ray Score.

Marmon Francis scored Del Ray's touchdown in the third period when he took a 20-yard forward pass from Hardy Gensmere and raced 40 yards to the Alpha Delta Omega goal line.

Both Del Ray and Alpha Delta Omega "padded" for the game, with the former obtaining Dick Allen, of the St. Mary's Celtics, and the latter eleven using Ellett Cabell, of the Celtics, and Russell Sutton, Alexandria boy who has been starring for Hargrave Military Academy at Chatham, Va., this fall.

Soccerists and Fans End Game in Free-for-All

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Dec. 7.—Hancock and Williamsport semipro soccerists, battling for Washington County honors, this afternoon stopped playing soccer and joined in a free-for-all which suddenly ended the game in the second half with Williamsport leading at 2 to 0.

A member of the Hancock Team started the trouble, attacking Referee Melvin Kaplan while protesting a decision. Before long not only were members of both teams at it, hammer and tongs, but the fans also had taken a hand, with both fists and bottles flying.

Fortunately no serious injuries resulted although a number of black eyes and bruised heads were received. Quiet was not restored until the Hancock Team was hustled out of town.

Generals Open Season On Mat on Saturday

Lexington, Va., Dec. 7.—Five days remain before the Washington and Lee University wrestlers open their 1930 season here Saturday, meeting the Richmond Y. M. C. A. Coach A. E. Mathis, who guided the Generals to an undefeated season last year, previous to the Southern Conference at V. M. I., has been working daily with his men, and the large number of veterans on hand, plus the addition of good freshman material, points to another favorable season on the mat. Last year the Generals won all of their six meets and landed third place in the conference tourney.

Monogram men who have returned to this year's squad are:

James Osterman, Chambersburg, Pa., 135 pounds; Wayne H. Mathis, Elwood, Ill., 158 pounds; Tex Tilson, Whitefish, Tex., Southern Conference champion at the 175-pound class; Pat Mitchell, Portsmouth, Ohio, heavyweight, and Charles Davidson, Lexington, Va., 125 pounds. T. M. Belser, Columbia, S. C., 158 pounds, captain of that year's team, has decided to leave school at the end of the semester and resigned his captaincy at the last meeting of the athletic council. Mose Maitox, Leesville, Va.; Bob Nelson, Richmond, Va.; Collas Harris, Alexandria, Va., and Fred Palmer, Yonkers, N. Y.

Promising Frosh material includes: "Dynamite" Evans, Montgomery, Ala.; Harold Abramson, Albany, N. Y.; C. E. Thomas, Kingston, Pa.; Alan Wofford, Johnson City, Tenn.; Ed. De Vas, Charleston, W. Va., and Sam Clark, Cass, W. Va.

The schedule:

January 10—North Carolina State (there).
February 5—Davidson (here); 14, V. P. I. (here); 21, Duke (there).

Palace-D. G. S. Beats Arcola Gridmen, 18-0

Led by Harry Divver, Frank Tonker, and the Heflin brothers, the Palace-District Grocery Store eleven experienced little trouble in defeating the Arcola Heights Team yesterday afternoon on the Arlington Field by an 18-to-0 score. The Southwesters counted a touchdown in each of the first three periods.

The victory was a costly one for Palace, however, as Divver received a bad gash above his right eye which necessitated six stitches, and which will probably put him out of action for the rest of the season.

Apaches Defeat Mohawks 12-6 as Ty Rauber Stars

Pass to Dugan Brings Early Score; Hawks, Trailing, 12-0, Rally to Make Touchdown in Second Half.

from the Apaches this season. While Sweeney made several good gains and caught two passes, he limped off the field just after the fourth period began, never having reached the heights of his previous Mohawk-Apache appearances.

Series Now 6-3 in Hawks' Favor.

It was the first time that the Apaches have won the title twice in a row and the second time that both teams have scored in the same game since the first clash of these rivals which ended 21-7 in 1922. The series now stands six victories to three in favor of the Mohawks.

Perhaps the most disappointed spectator was Eddie Abbey, player-coach of the Mohawks, who was forced to watch the game from a chair beside the players' bench with his crutches parked beside him. A broken leg two weeks ago ended the playing days of the Mohawk leader. The game may or may not have been different had he been in his old uniform.

The game was cleanly played. The only penalties were technical on the Mohawks, one for off-side and two for delaying the game.

FIRST QUARTER.

Browning, of the Mohawks, kicked off to Meyers, who brought it back to the 30-yard line. On the second play, Rauber went off tackle for 45 yards, Sweeney bringing him down from behind after Farrell had carried out the safety man. Rauber and Meyers made it a first down on the Mohawk 18. The Hawk line braced and Rauber's attempted place-kick was low, the Mohawks recovering on the 12-yard line.

Colliere punted 46 yards to Dugan, who was downed on the Hawks' 29-yard line. Rauber's pass to Dugan was incomplete. Rauber then tossed to Birthright for 12 yards and a first down on the Mohawk 19-yard mark. Dugan lost 5 yards at right end, Lombard spilled Rauber for a 2-yard loss, and Myers squirmed off-tackle for 6 yards. Rauber then tried a placement from the 27-yard line. His effort was low and easily blocked.

Colliere kicked outside of his own 39-yard line. Birthright and Myers made 14 yards and a first down on the Hawks' 25-yard mark. Rauber picked up 6 yards on two attempts at left tackle and Myers carried the ball to within a foot of a first down. Rauber crashed through tackle for a first down on the Mohawk 14-yard strip.

Rauber dove through a big hole at right tackle for 8 yards. Myers was smothered for no gain. Delaney threw Rauber for a 4-yard loss. Rauber passed to Dugan over the right side of the line, Dugan going over for a touchdown unmolested. Rauber's attempted placement went under the bar. Score: Apaches, 6; Mohawks, 0. The quarter ended.

SECOND QUARTER.

Delabre took Rauber's kick-off and returned 8 yards to the Hawks' 31-yard line, where Clifford brought him down. Colliere passed to Sweeney for 12 yards and a first down on the 50-yard mark. Birthright was dropped in his tracks by Briggs after intercepting Sweeney's pass on the Apaches' 49-yard strip. Rauber's 36-yard punt was downed on the Hawks' 25-yard line. The Hawks could not gain and Colliere kicked 31 yards to Dugan, who returned 5 yards to his own 47-yard mark.

A poor punt by Rauber went about 15 yards outside on the Hawks' 36-yard strip. Delabre and Dewey made 8 yards on three attempts at tackle. Colliere's 42-yard punt was taken by Dugan, who slipped and fell on his own 31-yard line. Rauber pounded his way for 11 yards and a first down. Rauber kicked and Birthright recovered Dewey's fumble on the Hawk 35-yard mark. Rauber plowed through center for 5 and repeated for 4. Brown spilled Myers for no gain. A short pass, Rauber to Birthright, gained 9 yards and a first down on the Mohawk 16-yard line. McCann substituted for Birthright, then made 2 at center. Rauber failed to gain at left guard. McCann on a double pass also failed to gain. Rauber passed 12 yards to Dugan for a first down on the Mohawk 2-yard line. Rauber shot through guard for a touchdown. His place-kick effort for the extra point again was too low. Score: Apaches, 12; Mohawks, 0.

THIRD QUARTER.

Tom Farrell fumbled Gass' kick-off, O'Brien recovering for the Mohawks on the Apaches' 45-yard strip. Delabre made 5 yards on two attempts at tackle. Hudack spilled Sweeney for no gain at right end. Rauber knocked down Colliere's pass, the Apaches taking the ball on downs. Rauber kicked to the Hawks' 44-yard line. Sweeney and Collier collected 3 yards and Gass return-punted 42 yards to Dugan. Rauber kicked out 29 yards to Colliere, who went outside on the 26-yard strip.

Delabre shot a short pass to Brown, which gained a first down on the Apaches' 10-yard mark. Delabre, picked up 6 at left guard on three tries, and Sweeney's pass on fourth down was grounded, the Apaches taking the oval on their 4-yard line. Colliere took Rauber's short punt and sped down the side lines for 19 yards to the Apache 3-yard line. Delabre on his second attempt went through right guard for a touchdown. Colliere's drop-kick for the extra point was too low. Score: Apaches, 12; Mohawks, 6.

Hudack returned Gass' kick-off to the Apache 40-yard strip. Carroll downed Rauber's 40-yard boot on the Mohawk 30-yard line. After an attempted lateral had failed, and Delabre had made barely a yard, Colliere passed to Delabre for 12 yards and a first down on the Hawks' 43-yard mark. Colliere passed to Brown for 14 yards and a first down on the Apache 42-yard strip. Score: Apache, 12; Mohawks, 6.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Colliere's heave to Brown gained 8 yards and a first down on the Apaches' 31-yard strip. The Hawks failed to gain and Dugan knocked down Sweeney's pass. Colliere's poor punt went outside on the Apache 30-yard mark. Hudak collected 3 yards at right tackle. Wondrack spilled Hudak. Rauber plowed his way for 7 yards and a first down on Apaches' 41-yard line. McCann made a yard at center and Rauber on two tries went off-tackle for 6 yards. Rauber punted 45 yards to Sweeney, who ran outside on the Mohawk 20-yard strip. Colliere kicked on first down, the ball being downed on Apaches' 43-yard mark. McCann made 3 at right guard. Sweeney limped off the field and Dewey replaced him. Hudak fumbled and Gass recovered for the Mohawks on the Apaches' 43-yard line. Dewey made 4 on a reverse play. The Mohawks were penalized 5 yards for delaying the game. Jim Montague broke through and tossed Dewey for a yard loss. Colliere kicked 26 yards to Dugan, who returned to his own 30-yard line. Rauber went off-tackle for 5 and McCann galloped through center for 6 yards and a first down. Rauber punted 55 yards to Dewey, who was downed on his own 21-yard mark. Dewey made 10 yards and a first down on two attempts at end. Mohawks were penalized 5 yards for stalling. Colliere then passed to Eddinger for 16 yards and a first down on the Apaches' 44-yard line. DeLabre made 2 at center, after another pass by Colliere was incomplete. Mohawks penalized 5 yards for stalling. Gass and DeLabre made 7 yards and a first down on the Apaches' 30. Rauber ended the threat by intercepting Colliere's pass. He returned it 22 yards before he was tackled on the Hawks' 48-yard mark. Wondrack held Myers for no gain. Rauber's 43-yard boot was taken by Dewey, who was thrown on his own 16-yard line. After a lateral pass to Dewey had failed, Colliere tossed to DeLabre for a 25-yard gain, putting the ball on the Mohawks' 40-yard mark. DeLabre made 2 yards at center as the game ended.

Final score: Apaches, 12; Mohawks, 6.

Apaches to Play Celtic Gridmen Next Sunday

The St. Mary's Celtics, of Alexandria, will play the Apaches a return game next Sunday at Griffith Stadium. Managers Charlie Corbett and Seymour Hall agreed to the contest following yesterday's game.

Post League Champions Challenge Apache Club

Inasmuch as they recently won the unlimited championship of The Post's Capital City Football League and have been undefeated, untied and not scored on, the Mercurys feel that they are entitled to a crack at the District title won yesterday by the Apaches.

The Southwesters have challenged the Apaches to a game, to be played on any convenient date.

GROVE FANS 10 IN 5 INNINGS.

Bob Grove struck out eleven of the White Sox one day at Shibe Park, last June. He fanned ten in the first five innings and might have gone after the American League record but Connie Mack warned him to save some of his extraordinary stuff for later in the year.

VANCE OFFERED "CUT."

Dazzy Vance had a salary talk with Frank York and Steve McKeever the other day. They suggested a cut in the Dazzler's $20,000 annual wage, but the canny Vance advised them to wait until the earned run averages were issued.

Four Matches At Home for Cavaliers

Bobby Goldstein, Unbeaten as Freshman, Now Available.

Many Veterans With Squad; First Test With Generals.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., Dec. 7.—Virginia is looking forward to one of the best boxing seasons the Cavaliers have enjoyed in years. Seven dual matches have been arranged, four at home and three away. In addition the Southern Conference will be invited to hold its annual ring tournament here again this season.

Johnny La Rowe, Cavalier's ring coach, has had a fine squad of men drilling all fall. Practice is slacking up now, for the ringmen, along with other students, must face a pre-season elimination test in the form of fall term examinations.

If all the candidates for the boxing team pass their fall examination Virginia will look forward to the best team since the first conference boxing title was won five seasons ago.

Bobby Goldstein From Freshman Team.

For the bantamweight class there will be Jack Fishburne, who won his "V" last winter, and Charlie McNeill from the '30 first-year ring squad. As lightweights there will be Mike LoCiglia, a veteran letterman, and Bobby Goldstein, the undefeated sensation of last winter's freshman campaign.

Wellford Smith, a "V" man, is again out for the lightweight class. As welterweights there are Capt. Bob Rainey, Southern Conference champion in this division, and Gene Stevens, who won his first-year numerals.

Charlie Payne, also a numeral man, and former A. M. A. ring star, is expected to be the leading welterweight candidate. Fenton Gentry, who won his "V" last winter, and Lewis Reiss, of the successful first-year team, are light-heavyweight contenders.

Motley Again to Box As Heavyweight.

Hunter Motley, star heavyweight two seasons ago and captain of the Cavalier eleven, will again be boxing heavyweight. Herbert Byrant, full back on the football team, has already started trying out for this same position.

The 1931 boxing schedule follows:

January 17—Washington and Lee, at home.

January 20—Virginia Polytechnic Institute, at home.

January 31—Virginia Military Institute, in Lexington.

February 3—Florida, at home.

February 7—North Carolina, in Chapel Hill.

February 13—Duke, at home.

February 21—Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia.

BUCK ROGERS, 2430 A. D. — Plots Discord

More strange adventures in a full color page every Sunday. By Phil Nowlan and Dick Calkins

WE PLUNGED INTO THE DEPTHS, SEEKING SOME SIGN OF ATLANTIS, THE ANCIENT CITY THAT SANK BENEATH THE OCEAN.
I WAS SUSPICIOUS OF ARDALA VALMAR. I TOLD WILMA SO—.
SHE TRIED TO STEAL THIS SHIP—BUT WE CAN'T PROVE IT.
AND SHE TRIED TO ABANDON US WHEN WE WENT OVERBOARD
COPYRIGHT JOHN F. DILLE CO. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
AT THE SAME MOMENT ARDALA, IN THE PRIVACY OF HER CABIN—
BUCK AND WILMA ARE BEGINNING TO SUSPECT ME—I'LL HAVE TO GIVE THEM SOMETHING ELSE TO THINK ABOUT!
AND SO—LATER—WHEN ARDALA ENTERED THE CHART ROOM—
THIS IS HIGHLY IRREGULAR! WHERE IS YOUR UNIFORM?
IN MY CABIN OF COURSE—I DON'T HAVE TO WEAR IT, DO I, WHEN I'M NOT ON DUTY?
SHE THINKS SHE'LL VAMP MY BUCK AWAY FROM ME, DOES SHE? WELL, WE'LL SEE ABOUT THAT!

He is 78 years of age and still is able to climb the steps with rapidity.

SMITH CONSPIRACY TRIAL WILL ENTER THIRD WEEK TODAY

Government Witnesses Still Are Being Examined in Case Against Trio.

LAWYERS FOR DEFENSE SEEK TO POINT ERRORS

Malone to Resume Stand at Session This Morning; End Is Nearing.

The trial of three former officers of the F. H. Smith Co. in criminal division 2 of District Supreme Court on charges of conspiring to embezzle funds of the company and to conceal records, will swing into its third week this morning.

As soon as a jury was secured on the fourth day of the trial, a long procession of Government witnesses began its slow march over the stand. The latest of these, Charles T. Malone, expert accountant and Department of Justice agent, has remained on the stand for a day and a half and will again be under cross-examination when Justice William Hitz convenes court this morning. Cross-examination of the witness is being conducted by Frank G. Raichle, of defense counsel.

Credibility Attacks Seen.

While the line of defense has not been directly revealed by counsel, its trend has been indirectly indicated on several occasions during examinations of witnesses. Apparently the defense will strongly attack the credibility of witnesses introduced in support of the Government's charge of a conspiracy to conceal records.

Cross-examination Saturday of Mr. Malone indicated that expert testimony brought in on the embezzlement count will be weakened, if possible, by showing apparent errors in the experts' calculations. Taking four items from the many traced on direct examination by Mr. Malone, defense counsel traced what were alleged to be the same items through other books, concluding for them a disposition at variance with that reached by the witness.

The trial, which has mainly brought out monotonous recitations of technicalities, has been occasionally enlivened by sharp passages between witnesses and defense counsel on cross-examination. Lawyers' arguments have also provided some relief from long accounts of bookkeeping methods and transactions.

Defense Witnesses Unknown.

The defense, beyond the few indirect revelations of its program, has so far kept its intentions in the dark. It is not even known who its witnesses will be, although it was learned during last week that the defense expected that the case would go to the jury by December 20. This conclusion was based on a statement of the prosecution that its testimony would require only about half a day after Mr. Malone leaves the stand.

Attorneys for the Government are Nugent Dodds, Acting Assistant Attorney General, and Neil Burkinshaw, assistant district attorney.

Defense counsel includes, in addition to Mr. Raichle, Wilton J. Lambert, Luther H. Yeatman, George D. Horning, jr., and Edmund Toland.

The three defendants are G. Bryan Pitts, C. Elbert Anadale and John H. Edwards, jr.

Alleged Fleeing Driver Arrested After Chase

Foster F. Sheller, 35 years old, of Fourteenth street near Parkwood place northwest, was arrested early yesterday by police of the Tenth Precinct in a thrilling crosstown chase after, it is alleged, his car collided with another automobile at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest and failed to stop.

Arthur L. Garrett, 22 years old, of 705 E street northeast, driver of the machine struck, hailed a passing taxi and gave chase after he found that his car had been disabled. Sheller, it is said, when he saw he was being followed, raced out Fourteenth street at a terrific speed, with the taxi in close pursuit. The chase ended at Park road. Sheller was released under a bond of $500.

NOTABLE EXPANSION OF BUSINESS SEEN

Colder Weather and Yule Sales Account for Pick-Up in Sections.

FORD AUTO SALES DROP

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Although there may be some holes in the Christmas stocking this year, it will scarcely be empty, judging by the reports of retail trade during the first week of December.

Industry continues under diminishing steam, and mercantile agencies characterize trade reports as "spotty," but over extensive areas there has been a notable expansion of buying. Wholesale merchants are receiving some reorders for Christmas toys. Colder weather has helped the movement of heavy wearing apparel, although most merchants report a preference this year for cheaper and more useful lines, even the sorely depressed jewelry trade is noting some pick-up.

One of the most confident reports of December trade prospects comes from H. T. Parson, president of F. W. Woolworth Co., who says, "We have every prospect of a satisfactory December business, as we have the benefit of an extra trading day during Christmas week more than we had a year ago. If weather conditions throughout the country are at all normal, retail trade will be greatly benefited, as last year the weather in December all over the country was about as poor as we have ever experienced it. The buying public seems to be more in favor of doing business this year than last, so December should be a good retail month."

November Trade Discouraing.

Reports of retail sales appearing for November have been about the least favorable of the year, as have many other statistical exhibits for that month. Dollar volume of retail sales, however, reflect in part the extensive decline in retail prices. The two largest mail order houses, however, reported declines of about 20 and 25 per cent from the like month a year ago, which is interpreted as showing pronounced shrinkage of purchasing power in rural areas.

In the steel industry, advances of $1 a ton in prices of heavier products for the first quarter of next year were widely hailed as the most constructive development in some time. It was recalled that a similar move in 1922 marked a step along the way to recovery. Nevertheless, even this increase does not place price schedules on a particularly profitable basis, and it must be tested by the demands of coming months. Iron Age estimated ingot production at 39 per cent of capacity, a further decline of 2 points.

The recent increase in copper prices remains untested, although custom smelters have moved their prices up close to the producers' 12-cent level. What copper was sold moved mostly at 11½ cents during the week, although one smelter shaded the price to 11¼ late in the week.

Oil Conditions Troublesome.

The troublesome conditions in the oil industry were accentuated with further heaviness of gasoline prices. Royal Dutch officials have urged the industry to follow the example set by the steel and copper industries in efforts to stabilize prices, but since the petroleum industry is less closely controlled than copper and steel, the problem is more complicated than in those industries.

Rapidly increasing operations of the Chevrolet Motor division of General Motors have been a stabilizing influence in automobile output, although aggregate production for November dropped to a new low for recent years, despite that maker's record output for that month of 47,257 units. Its December schedules call for about 60,000 units. Ford Motor Co., however, produced only 52,000 cars in November, less than half the output for November of 1929, and present information indicates the December output will be still lower.

Electric power production and bank clearings as reported for the latest week compared more favorably with the like week of last year than they have for several weeks.

INVESTMENT BUYING OF STOCKS SHRINKS

Aggregate Sales Decline to Lowest Mark for Full Week During Year.

INDEX OFF 2.8 POINTS

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The financial markets grew emaciated last week, as the nourishing stream of investment buying all but disappeared.

Trading in stocks was apathetic and for the second week since the peak of the rebound from the year's lows was reached, share prices drifted back toward the bottom resistance points established November 10. The turnover in the stock exchange averaged only about 1,900,000 shares a day, and the aggregate was the smallest for a full week this year.

The sag in the bond market appeared to have been checked early in the week, but heaviness of railroad equities in the share market had a depressing influence on the second grade carrier lines, which became a drag upon almost the entire listed bond market. The gilt-edged issues, however, held their ground well, and the foreign department was steadier, notably the German issues.

Earnings' Estimates Cheerless.

With business statistics for November indicating still lower levels of activity and earnings estimates for the curren quarter presenting, in the main, a cheerless picture, investors felt that they need be in no hurry to place their funds, even though there may be plenty of investment bargains going begging.

Furthermore, there was apparently a certain amount of necessitous liquidation during the week, which had an adverse influence on investment and speculative sentiment.

The stock market rallied early in the week, reflecting advance rumors of the $1-a-ton increase in first quarter quotations for heavier steel products, but when the advance was actually announced on Wednesday, the market had started to slip, and continued downhill rather sleeply for the rest of the week. The price index of 90 leading shares showed a net loss for the week of 2.8 points. The list has now lost nearly two-thirds of the recovery from the November 10 lows.

Hoover's Message Constructive.

The convening of Congress failed to provide much stimulus for the market in either direction. The President's message was generally described in banking circles as "constructive," as were the reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Secretary of the Treasury. But if Wall street was under any delusion a year ago that Washington might be expected to rescue the country from business depression, it has in the main returned to its old fatalistic theory that the most important element in the cure of economic ills is time.

Much interest was manifested in the recent conferences of important financial leaders on both sides of the Atlantic and reports of much transoceanic telephoning. Gov. Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank; Owen D. Young and J. P. Morgan, all of whom are said to have just returned from Europe, were among persons gathering at the Federal Reserve Bank on Thursday, as was Eugene Meyer, newly appointed governor of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington.

If the conferences have had anything to do with war debts, Wall street now understands that no changes in the terms of settlement could be agreed upon. The belief was expressed in some quarters that a plan of rectifying the unequal and troublesome distribution of monetary gold may be in prospect. A report that bankers had turned down a request for a large Italian loan was officially denied, but persisted.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

AN AMERICAN REPORTER REVIEWS PROF. ALBERT EINSTEIN.

Scene—A pier in New York. Prof. Einstein has just landed in America.

REPORTER—Prof. Einstein, there are four questions a notable visitor to America has to answer.

Prof. Einstein—I don't see why.

Reporter—Nevertheless, it is true. First, let me ask you what you think of the skyline?

Prof. Einstein—What skyline? I don't see any.

Reporter—Right over there.

Prof. Einstein—That's not really a skyline.

Reporter (puzzled)—Isn't it?

Prof. Einstein—To the unscientific mind it may seem a skyline, but it really is no line at all. It is really a gelatinous substance known to the laboratory as X plus D3 or alligterosis. Only people who get their impressions from ferryboats could possibly labor under the illusion they are seeing a line.

Reporter—You mean to say that New York has no skyline?

Prof. Einstein—None. It's just a phenomena due to polycrimps flying through the electromagnetic field.

Reporter—But surely you are impressed by our skyscrapers?

Prof. Einstein—What skyscrapers do you refer to?

Reporter—Those over there. That's the Woolworth Building and that's the Telephone Building.

Prof. Einstein—Mere masses in bent space. I question whether they are really there. You believe they are there because you can see and feel them. But what is vision? What is touch? And are they as fast as light?

* * * *

REPORTER (weakening rapidly)—What do you think of American life and customs?

Prof. Einstein—Life is intangible. Customs are something of which one can not make a graph. What, after all, do we know about life? Is there any proof that it may not be something we can comprehend only through an understanding of algebra, physics, advanced chemistry and the lateral pass. And are customs round or square cornered?

Reporter (quite dazed)—Maybe you're right. Now, one more question, professor. What do you think of American girls?

Prof. Einstein—Why should I think of American girls?

Reporter—It's compulsory.

Prof. Einstein—Compulsion is relative, my son. Metaphysically speaking, it is impossible to——

Reporter (realizing that he is over his head)—I mean, do you think the American girl is as attractive as the European girl?

Prof. Einstein—What do you mean when you say "girl?"

Reporter—Why, er——

Prof. Einstein—You think of a girl as a perpendicular biological phenomenon in short skirts. How do you know that she is not an oval mass of bent space being thrown off like electrons from swiftly rotating nitholwatts with all the speed of an idzol?

Reporter—Would you mind running over that again, professor?

Prof. Einstein—I would.

Reporter—Thanks very much, professor.

Prof. Einstein—For what?

Reporter—For this interview.

Prof. Einstein—What interview?

Reporter (jumping off the dock)—I give up.

TO A YOUNG LADY.

ALTEOUGH it grieves me, lovely lady,
Yet I must confess
Those eyes of yours are sapphire pools
Of lucid loveliness.

Despite the anguish that it brings me,
Still I can't withold
The information that your tresses
Shimmering are, and gold.

And his resistance to such magic
Is extremely low—
I've golden hair with eyes of blue, and Speak but what I know.

Your lover's mine, and I could keep him
Always; but your eyes
Ensnared him ere we met, and there are Certain legal ties.

AH, THERE, LOVE!

Love is like a
Water lily,
Soft and pure and——
Awfully silly!

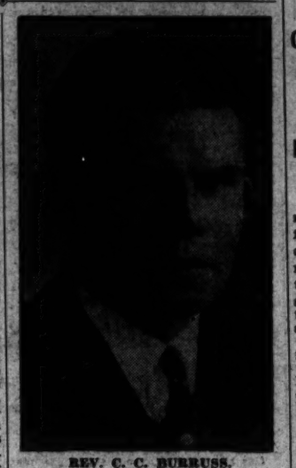
Holy Writ Described As Guide to Living

Rev. C. C. Burruss Says Bible Molds Character of Nations.



REV. C. C. BURRUSS.

A large congregation of Bethesda Methodists heard their pastor, the Rev. C. Carroll Burruss, preach yesterday morning on "The Book of Books." Taking as his text, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path," Mr. Burruss spoke in part as follows:

"It has been said that man is incurably religious, and such has been the verdict of all history. Every nation and race under the sun since time began has had its gods, whether they were many or few. The soul of man cries out for some outward expression of itself and somehow, somewhere finds its God. So, from the great stone remnants of the temples of the Ancient Druids to the totem worship of the Esquimaux, from the fetish worship of the African to the chant of the priest in the cathedral, men bare their souls to God and cry out for the infinite.

"Since man's nature demands a religion of some kind, it is there that he turns for the answer to the riddle of life. Is there a God? If so, where is he? Is he the maker of the universe and the giver of all life? If so what is man's relation to him; for what purpose and to what end was he created?

Finds Answer in Bible.

"The words of the Psalmist are the answer to man's search. 'Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path.' The Bible is God's revelation of Himself to man. The faith of all Christendom must stand or fall with the Bible. Dr. Charles Hodge stated years ago that 'The best evidence of the Bible's being the Word of God is to be found between its covers. It proves itself.' It is there that we see its divine character, for the Bible is a book of life and appeals to that which is fundamental in life.

"It is a living book because it deals with life. Throughout its pages we do not find discussions of dogmas or creeds or theories of life, but we find the story of the lives of men and of God's revelation to them.

"The book is its own evidence. Has this book given power and purity to the lives of men? Has it been a light and a guide to those who sought God? Does it exalt man and reveal God? The testimony of a great multitude, which no man can number, answers, 'Yes, a living testimony.'

Christ Sent as Guide.

"The Bible is the revelation of Jesus Christ, God's revelation of Himself to man. The New Testament is the culmination of the Old Testament, and the New Testament centers about Him who was the Way, the Truth and the Life. Not until Christ had men such a light to guide their lives, and such a pattern to follow.

"Man searches, God reveals—and what is man's answer? The Psalmist replies, 'Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path.' What is your answer? What is the answer of the world today? The Bible has a part to play in an age that is scientific and rational and material. It still has its contribution to offer. What the world needs is not more machinery, greater efficiency and an increase in material values, but more stability of character and manhood, to control the forces man has already unharnessed.

"Our modern civilization can be likened to a colossal engine constructed by man and placed upon a great incline and released. It gathers momentum as it continues, and, unless controlled, will stop with a great crash and be destroyed.

Material vs. Spiritual.

"Who will see far enough into the future to read the handwriting on the wall and point men to the source of all spiritual values? Unless men can control themselves they can never control the machines they make, nor adjust their lives to the rapid changes of our modern life.

"Is the Bible an untried, an unproven, an unknown source of strength? Are we going to wells without water to quench our thirst? For centuries it has been the source of spiritual strength for individuals, for tribes, for nations. It is full of instructions and promises for men in all walks of life and in every condition.

"It has been tested and proven, and the lives of those who have thirsted and drank and have had their thirst quenched are a testimony to this fact. Every hospital, every philanthrophy, every slave set free, every force for righteousness and mercy and justice are mute testimony to Him who said, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me,' and they in turn testify of the revelation we have of him, the Holy Scriptures."

SHOOTING CLIMAXES FIGHT OF ROOMERS

Henry Trent Charged With Trying to Kill Emile Kraus in Dispute.

ASSAILANT HELD DRUNK

Emile Krauss, 36 years old, who rooms on I street, near Fifth street northwest, was shot last night during a fight with another roomer. Henry T. Trent, 50 years old, is held at the Sixth Precinct on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

The fight took place on the third floor of the house and was the aftermath of a long argument. Trent, who, police said, was intoxicated, fought down a flight of stairs with Krauss who had resented remarks made by Trent to Mrs. Krauss.

Krauss was stunned by a fall on the staircase. Trent then went into a room and obtained a gun, according to police, and shot Krauss when he continued the fight. The wounded man was taken to Casualty Hospital. The bullet struck him in the left side, inflicting only a flesh wound. He later was taken to his home.

Trent was afterward taken to Emergency Hospital when it was learned he had ben injured in the struggle.

CURB PRICES SLUMP AS TRADING PICKS UP

Selling at Week-End Pulls Shares Close to Lows of Present Year.

OIL ISSUES ARE HARD HIT

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Resumption of selling toward the end of last week pulled the curb market level rather close to the year's lows. All groups participated in the crumbling of prices, but oils and investment trusts showed particular heaviness and several members of these groups went to new minimums.

Interest on the buying side was very small and increases in offerings found the market ready to go lower. Trading was generally dull, although all accelerations in the pace came when quotations were slipping. Mild rallies early in the week served chiefly to increase the amount of stock placed for sale. Apparently holders had become discouraged by the market's action and decided to liquidate, partly to establish income tax losses and partly to permit a shift of speculative positions.

Electric Bond & Share, with a break of more than 5 points, led the utilities downward. American Gas & Electric, after rallying feebly prior to the extra dividend news, dropped below 90 after announcement of the payment had been made. Issues that move less widely, such as American Superpower, Niagara Hudson, United Light "A" and Middle West Utilities, joined the movement with rather nominal losses.

Discouragement over the oil situation brought late selling in the petroleum shares. Humble and Gulf broke to new lows in both the Friday and Saturday trading. Cities Service had several sinking spells, but was fairly well supported on the recessions.

Liquidation of investment trust stocks was a feature of the week's market. United Founders, after withstanding severe pressure at 9, finally broke nearly a point below that quotation. Goldman Sachs Trading, after moving up to 12, joined the procession and tumbled more than 3 points from that high.

Wide changes in specialties were almost exclusively in inactive issues. The prominent industrials showed fair steadiness.

Uses Fine Tooth-Comb In Disarming Suspect

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Using a fine-tooth comb to simulate a weapon, James L. Fitch gained possession of a bandit suspect's pistol last night and shot him in the hand in the ensuing scuffle. Then he was arrested on suspicion.

Several hours later Fitch was released when Walter Szydlowski, alias Smith, 19, applied at a hospital for treatment. The police said he admitted having robbed a grocery of $30 a few moments before Fitch, attracted by a woman customer's screams, arrived and disarmed the youth.

Coffee Shop Is Robbed.

Harry Mervis, proprietor of a coffee shop located at 1719 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday reported to police that his place of business had been entered in the early morning and a man's coat stolen. The thieves also made off with a woman's coat, a quantity of cigarettes and some change left in the cash register. The burglars made their exit through a coal chute. The loot was valued at $48.

BOND LIST RECEDES IN SPITE OF RALLIES

FOREIGN UNIT STEADIER

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The bond market made a poor start on the final stage of the year's trading. The decline that set in more than two months ago after the market reached the best level of the year was resumed last week after a feeble effort to regain stability in the early sessions.

Ordinarily December is a month of irregular movements and the first week went according to precedent. Bonds again suffered from the lack of confidence in all securities that is a natural consequence of a troubled business and financial world. Demand was lacking and each dip of the stock market induced selling that thrice forced the price level of bonds to a new 1930 low in the averages.

A circumstance contributing to the irregularity was the selling of bonds by investors to establish losses for income tax purposes. Second grade bonds, recovery of which is dependent upon business improvement, have made a dismal showing most of the year and have dropped far below the low of 1929.

Buying by Banks Dwindles.

Support from individual investors has been lacking and banks and institutions have put their surplus funds into only gilt-edged bonds that can be marketed readily when the money is needed for commercial customers and other fields of investment prove more attractive.

Trading was dull at the start of the week and price movements narrowed, giving the list a steadier appearance. Pressure against railroad shares induced liquidation in carrier bonds and contributed to the unsettlement which developed in the domestic section in the latter part of the week. A few high grade bonds and numerous medium and low grade issues dipped into new low ground for the year.

The majority of the gilt-edged issues held fairly steady. While banks and institutions with large surplus funds seeking employment have maintained a cautious buying policy they have been quick to take advantage of bargains from day to day. Their support has enabled seasoned issues to hold a good portion of the advance made earlier in the year.

U. S. Governments Recede.

United States Governments were quiet and as a whole receded slightly from the previous high levels. The request of the Secretary of the Treasury for congressional authority to issue $8,000,000,000 in bonds caused no surprise in financial circles in view of the expectation that the Government would refund the Liberty issues in that amount that are callable in 1932 and 1933. The chief subject of conjecture in connection with the refunding operations is the rate of interest the new bonds will carry, and the opinion was voiced that it would be brought more in line with the easier conditions in the money market.

Foreign bonds were steadier. Chancellor Bruening's emergency financial program and the support he obtained during the week helped sentiment toward German obligations. Government obligations and some of the German bank and industrials were in demand. French bonds were undisturbed by the resignation of the government. South Americans, while moving irregularly, showed littlet net change.

The municipal and utility groups furnished most of the new financing, which totaled $80,000,000, against $46,000,000 in the previous week.
